

CONTENTS

Abbreviations	vii
Preface	ix
1. Introduction to Three Grammatical Theories	1
1. The case grammar	1
2. The systemic grammar	3
3. The Chafian grammar	4
2. Some Aspects of a Relational Grammar	8
1. Generation of relational structures	8
1.1. Generation in three theories	8
1.2. Noun-centrality and verb-centrality	8
1.3. Inherent vs. circumstantial and sentential features	11
2. Selectional restrictions	14
3. Occurrence restrictions	16
3.1. Constraints on verb inflections	16
3.2. Co-occurrence of case relations	19
4. Deep identity of verbs	22
4.1. Subject selection	23
4.2. Feature incorporation	25
4.3. Variable reference	29
5. Hierarchy of verb-noun relations	30
5.1. Dependency relations	30
5.2. Transitivity relations and prepositions	32
5.3. The status of Circumstantial relations and prepositions	37
3. Transitivity Relations	42
1. Introduction: Fillmore (1968), Halliday (1967-8), and Chafe (1970) compared	42
2. The role of animateness in Fillmore's case categories	45
3. Summary of Transitivity relations	47
4. Agent	49
1. Agent, Patient, and three classes of verbs	49
2. Inanimate Agent vs. Instrument	53
3. Agent and volition	54
4. Agent with double roles	58
5. Agent and Causer	60
5. Patient	64
1. Patient vs. Experiencer	65
2. Sentential Patient	67
2.1. Easy and difficult	67
2.2. Begin	71
2.3. An analysis of modals	74
3. Sentential predicate vs. Possessive Patient	78
4. Existential Agent and Existential Patient	86

CONTENTS (Cont'd)

6.	Range	94
1.	Range and Patient compared	95
2.	"Actual" and "virtual"	99
2.1.	Definite and indefinite defined	100
2.2.	The role of "actual" and "virtual" in the accusative construction	107
2.3.	"Actual," "virtual," and "anticipation"	111
3.	Cognate object as "actual" and "virtual"	117
4.	Verbalized and nominalized Range (and the notion of Cognate Instrument)	121
7.	Source and Goal	126
1.	General properties of State, Source, and Goal	126
2.	Transitivity Goal	129
3.	Transitivity Goal and Patient compared	132
4.	Goal and Causer	139
5.	Circumstantial Goal and Source	145
6.	Goal and Benefactive	149
7.	"Outward" and "inward" verbs	154
8.	Three dimensions of directional reference	157
	Appendix — Verb Classification	163
1.	Sample classification	163
2.	Verb derivations	166
3.	Other semantic categories	168
4.	Chao's classification	169
5.	Wang's classification	169
	Bibliography	171
	Index	175