

Contents

List of illustrations	vii
1 Do parties respond? Challenges to political parties and their consequences	1
THOMAS POGUNTKE
2 Speaking for whom? From ‘old’ to ‘New’ Labour	15
JAMES E. CRONIN
3 From disaster to landslide: the case of the British Labour Party	41
PATRICK SEYD AND PAUL WHITELEY
4 From people’s movements to electoral machines? Interest aggregation and the social democratic parties of Scandinavia	61
NICHOLAS AYLOTT
5 From aggregation to cartel? The Danish case	86
KARINA PEDERSEN
6 How parties in government respond: distributive policy in post-Wall Berlin	105
LOUISE K. DAVIDSON-SCHMICH
7 Reaggregating interests? How the break-up of the Union for French Democracy has changed the response of the French moderate right	129
NICOLAS SAUGER
8 Radicals, technocrats and traditionalists: interest aggregation in two provincial social democratic parties in Canada	146
A. BRIAN TANGUAY

9 Paying for party response: parties of the centre-right in post-war Italy	176
JONATHAN HOPKIN

10 Latecomers but 'early-adapters': the adaptation and response of Spanish parties to social changes	198
LUIS RAMIRO AND LAURA MORALES

11 Representative rule or the rule of representations: the case of Russian political parties	227
SUSANNA PSHIZOVA

12 Five variations on a theme: interest aggregation by party today	250
KAY LAWSON

Index	267
--------------	-----