

Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
Foreword: Rediscovering Postcommunist Central Europe	xi
Introduction	xvii
1 Defining Central Europe as a Postcommunist Region	1
2 Positive and Negative Freedom in Central Europe before and after 1989	11
3 Virtual and Real Freedom in Central Europe after 1989	23
4 The Complete and Incomplete Transition in Central Europe	51
5 Fluctuating Socioeconomics and Postsocialist Inverted Morals	75
6 The Salvation of the Two Europes in 1968 from the Perspective of 1989	99
7 Vilnius 10 Group—Geopolitical Emancipation or a Lost Opportunity for Angelic Moral Politics?	109
8 The Demiurge of the EU and Central Europe	123
9 Different Meanings Applied to May 9th Victory Day in WWII: Russian and Baltic Perspectives after 1989	137
10 Social and Political Meaning of Light in Central Europe before and after 1989	157
11 Communist Nostalgia as Extrapolation of the Past into the Present	167
12 Katyń Does Not Happen Twice	177
Bibliography	193

