

INTRODUCTION

From Transition to Development

The Distance Traveled

The Dual Transition

China's Growth Performance

Becoming a "Normal" Country

China to the Future

Using This Textbook

Bibliography

I LEGACIES AND SETTING*1 The Geographical Setting

1.1 Landforms

1.2 Climate and Water

1.3 Provinces and Regions

1.4 Mineral Resources

1.5 Conclusion: Regional Differentiation

Bibliography

2 The Chinese Economy Before 1949

2.1 The Traditional Chinese Economy, 1127–1911

2.1.1 High-Productivity Traditional Agriculture

2.1.2 The Commercialized Countryside

2.1.2.1 Sophisticated Institutions

2.1.2.2 Competitive Markets

2.1.2.3 Small-Scale, "Bottom-Heavy" Economy

2.1.3	Crisis of the Traditional Economy?	38
2.1.4	The Failed Response to the West and Japan	40
2.2	The Beginnings of Industrialization, 1912–1937	43
2.2.1	Industry	43
2.2.2	Evaluation: How Broad Was Development in the 1912–1937 Period?	45
2.3	War and Civil War, 1937–1949	47
2.3.1	The Rise and Fall of a Japan-Centered East Asian Economy	47
2.3.2	The Rise of Manchuria	48
2.3.3	Increased State Intervention	49
2.3.4	Inflation	49
2.4	Legacies of the Pre–1949 Economy	50
2.4.1	Legacy for the Socialist Era (1949–1978)	50
2.4.2	Legacy for the Post–1978 Market Economy	51
	Bibliography	53

3

The Socialist Era, 1949–1978: Big Push Industrialization and Policy Instability	55
3.1 The Big Push Development Strategy	56
3.2 The Command Economic System in China	59
3.3 Policy Instability	62
3.3.1 Economic Recovery, 1949–1952	64
3.3.2 1953 and 1956: The Twin Peaks of the First Five-Year Plan	65
3.3.3 Retrenchment: The “Hundred Flowers” of 1956–1957	67
3.3.4 The Great Leap Forward, 1958–1960	69
3.3.5 Retrenchment: Crisis and “Readjustment,” 1961–1963	72
3.3.6 Launch of the Third Front, 1964–1966: New Expansion Hijacked by Radicalism	73
3.3.7 Retrenchment: The Cultural Revolution, 1967–1969	74
3.3.8 The Maoist Model: A New Leap in 1970	75
3.3.9 Retrenchment: Consolidation and Drift, 1972–1976	76
3.3.10 The Leap Outward: 1978 and the End of Maoism	77
3.3.11 A Final Turning Point: The Third Plenum and the Beginning of Economic Reform	79
3.4 Legacies of the Socialist Period	79
3.4.1 The Legacy of Policy Instability	79

3.4.2	The Shortcomings of the Development Strategy	80
3.4.3	Human Capital Base	82
	Bibliography	83
4	Market Transition: Strategy and Process	85
4.1	The Chinese Approach to Transition	86
4.2	How Did Reforms Start? The Initial Breakthrough in the Countryside	88
4.3	A Two-Phase Framework of Economic Reform	90
4.4	Elements of China's Transition Through 1992	91
4.4.1	Dual-Track System	91
4.4.2	Growing Out of the Plan	92
4.4.3	Particularistic Contracts	94
4.4.4	Entry	94
4.4.5	Prices Equating Supply and Demand	94
4.4.6	Incremental Managerial Reforms Instead of Privatization	95
4.4.7	Disarticulation	95
4.4.8	Initial Macroeconomic Stabilization Achieved Through the Plan	96
4.4.9	Continued High Saving and Investment	96
4.4.10	Conclusion of First-Phase Reforms	97
4.5	The Tiananmen Interlude	98
4.6	The Second Phase of Reform, 1993–Present	100
4.6.1	Prerequisites	101
4.6.1.1	Market Reunification	101
4.6.1.2	Recentralization	101
4.6.1.3	Macroeconomic Austerity	102
4.6.2	Regulatory Approach and Administrative Restructuring	102
4.6.2.1	Fiscal and Tax System	103
4.6.2.2	Banking and Financial System	103
4.6.2.3	Corporate Governance	104
4.6.2.4	External Sector: Membership in the World Trade Organization	104
4.6.3	Outcomes	105
4.6.3.1	From Inflation to Price Stability	105
4.6.3.2	State Enterprise Restructuring and Downsizing	105

4.6.3.3	Privatization	106
4.6.3.4	Reform with Losers	106
4.7	Contemporary Challenges	107
	Bibliography	110
5	The Urban–Rural Divide	113
5.1	A Dualistic System: The Division Between Urban and Rural	114
5.1.1	Origins of the Urban–Rural Divide	114
5.1.2	The Urban Economic System	116
5.1.2.1	The Danwei	116
5.1.2.2	Urban Property Rights	118
5.1.3	The Rural Economic System	119
5.1.3.1	Rural Collectives	119
5.1.3.2	Rural Property Rights	119
5.1.3.3	“Fuzzy” Property Rights and Land-Use Disputes	121
5.1.4	The Evolution of the Rural and Urban Systems During Market Transition	122
5.1.5	Invisible Walls: Administrative Barriers Today	124
5.2	Urbanization	126
5.3	Rural–Urban Migration	129
5.3.1	Overview of Migration	129
5.3.2	Characteristics of Migrants	131
5.4	Economic Consequences of the Urban–Rural Divide	131
5.4.1	Living Standards and Restrictions on Mobility	132
5.4.2	Addressing the Urban–Rural Divide	134
5.5	Conclusion	134
	Bibliography	135
II	PATTERNS OF GROWTH AND DEVELOPMENT	137
6	Growth and Structural Change	139
6.1	Growth	140
6.1.1	Data and the Measurement of Growth	140
6.1.2	Growth in Comparative Perspective	142
6.1.3	Instability in Growth	143
6.2	Investment	143
6.3	Structural Change: Common Patterns	148

6.4	Structural Change in China: Labor	151
6.5	Structural Change in China: GDP	153
6.6	Structural Change and Globalization	156
6.7	Conclusion	157
	Bibliography	158
7	Population Growth and the One-Child Family	161
7.1	The Demographic Transition	161
7.2	China's Demographic Transition	164
7.3	The Role of Government Policy	167
7.4	Consequences of the One-Child Policy	170
7.5	Changing Age Structure of the Population	172
7.6	Conclusion	177
	Bibliography	177
8	Labor and Human Capital	179
8.1	The Institutional Transformation of Chinese Labor	180
8.1.1	The Labor Force	180
8.1.2	Employment: Ownership and Labor Mobility	181
8.1.3	Employment, Unemployment, and State-Sector Downsizing	185
8.1.4	The Informal Sector: Emerging Dualism Within Urban Labor Markets	189
8.1.5	Rural Labor Markets	191
8.2	How Well Do Labor Markets Function in China Today?	192
8.2.1	Returns to Education	192
8.2.2	Human Capital and Educational Attainment	195
8.2.3	Other Attributes	198
8.2.4	The Migration Decision	199
8.2.5	Labor Markets Concluded	201
8.3	Social Security	202
8.4	Conclusion	206
	Bibliography	206
9	Living Standards: Incomes, Inequality, and Poverty	209
9.1	Income Growth	210
9.2	Poverty	212
9.2.1	Rural Poverty	212
9.2.1.1	Official Poverty Line	212

9.2.1.2	World Bank Internationally Comparable Poverty Line	212
9.2.1.3	Explaining Poverty Trends	214
9.2.2	Urban Poverty	216
9.2.3	Overall Poverty	216
9.3	Inequality	217
9.3.1	Accounting for All Income Sources	220
9.4	Physical Quality of Life Indicators	221
9.4.1	Life Expectancy at Birth	222
9.4.2	Other Health-Related Indicators	222
9.4.3	Education	223
9.4.4	Human Development Index	223
9.5	Income, GDP per Capita, and Purchasing Power Parity Once Again	225
9.6	Conclusion	226
	Bibliography	227
III	THE RURAL ECONOMY	229
10	Rural Organization	231
10.1	The Chinese Village	231
10.2	Agricultural Collectives	233
10.2.1	Features of the Agricultural Collectives	234
10.2.2	Discussion of Collectives	236
10.2.3	The Agricultural Policy Environment of the Collectives: "Grain First"	239
10.3	The Second Revolution in the Countryside: Rural Reforms, 1979–1984	240
10.3.1	Production Surges in the Wake of Rural Organizational Change	242
10.3.2	The Side-Effect of Reform: Rural Public Services Decline	243
10.4	The Emergence of Rural Land Markets	246
	Bibliography	248
11	Agriculture: Output, Inputs, and Technology	251
11.1	Overview of Post–1949 Agriculture	252
11.2	Technology Choice and Technical Innovation in Agriculture	254

11.3	The Green Revolution	258
11.3.1	Irrigation	258
11.3.2	Agricultural Chemicals	260
11.3.3	Seeds	261
11.4	Motive Power in the Countryside	263
11.5	Output and Yields: The Challenge of Intensification	265
11.6	Diversification and the Challenge of the Future	266
11.7	Genetically Modified Organisms	267
11.8	Globalization	268
	Bibliography	269

12	Rural Industrialization: Township and Village Enterprises	271
12.1	Origins of the TVEs	272
12.2	The Golden Age of TVE Development	274
12.3	Causes of Rapid Growth	275
12.4	Diverse Regional Models of TVE Development	282
12.4.1	The Southern Jiangsu (Sunan) Model	282
12.4.2	The Wenzhou Model	283
12.4.3	The Pearl River Delta Model	284
12.4.4	Failed or Absent TVE Development	284
12.5	The Transformation of TVEs in the New Century	285
12.5.1	The Changing Economic Environment of TVEs	285
12.5.2	TVE Restructuring: The Great Privatization	286
	12.5.2.1 National Policy and Local Models	288
	12.5.2.2 Market Conditions and Privatization	288
	12.5.2.3 Insider Privatization	289
	12.5.2.4 Local Variation in the Privatization Process	291
12.6	Emergence of New Forms of Rural Industry in the Twenty-First Century	292
	Bibliography	293

IV THE URBAN ECONOMY 295

13	Industry: Ownership and Governance	297
13.1	Ownership Change: A Diverse Industrial Base	298
	13.1.1 Ownership Change in the First Period of Transition	299
	13.1.2 Ownership Change from 1996 Through the Present	301

13.2	Industrial Finance	304
13.3	Transforming Corporate Governance in the State Sector	308
13.3.1	Creating Corporate Governance: Transition A	310
13.3.2	Creating Corporations: Transition B	313
13.3.2.1	Corporatization and the Company Law: Objectives and Principles	314
13.3.2.2	The Chinese System in Practice	316
13.3.2.3	Typology of Corporate Governance Systems	319
13.4	Privatization and Hybrid Ownership	323
13.5	Conclusion	325
	Bibliography	326

14	Structural Change: Industry, Energy, and Infrastructure	329
14.1	Growth and Structural Change in Manufacturing	329
14.1.1	Regional Growth Patterns	333
14.2	Energy	333
14.2.1	Energy Efficiency of the Economy	336
14.2.2	The Three Main Energy Sectors	338
14.2.2.1	Coal	338
14.2.2.2	Oil and Gas	339
14.2.2.3	Electric Power	341
14.2.3	Energy Security, Diversification, and Imports	341
14.3	Telecommunications	343
14.4	Common Features: Infrastructure Investment	345
14.5	Conclusion	347
	Bibliography	347

15	Technology Policy and the Knowledge-based Economy	349
15.1	Pursuing Critical Technologies: The R&D Effort	351
15.1.1	The Trajectory of China's Technology Effort	353
15.1.2	Strategies of R&D Investment	356
15.1.2.1	Do It Yourself	356
15.1.2.2	Buy It	357
15.1.2.3	Bargain for It	357
15.1.2.4	Seed It	358
15.1.2.5	Encourage Spin-offs	359
15.1.2.6	Open Up to Foreign Direct Investment	360
15.1.2.7	Support Domestic Entrepreneurship	360

15.2	Human Capital Resource Base	361
15.3	The Output of the R&D Effort	363
15.4	Redefining Government Technology Policy in the Twenty-First Century	365
15.4.1	Aligning Incentives in Favor of High-Technology Development	366
15.4.2	Deeper Integration into Global Production Networks	368
15.5	Conclusion	371
	Bibliography	372

V CHINA AND THE WORLD ECONOMY 375

16 International Trade 377

16.1	Background	379
16.2	The Process of Trade Reform	380
16.2.1	Initial Reform Steps	381
16.2.2	Liberalizing the Foreign-Trade System	382
16.3	A Dualist Trade Regime: The Export-Processing System	386
16.4	Toward an Open Economy	388
16.4.1	Currency Convertibility	388
16.4.2	World Trade Organization Membership	389
16.4.3	Openness Revisited	391
16.5	Outcomes: Rapid Growth and Structural Change	392
16.5.1	Exports	393
16.5.2	Imports	394
16.5.3	High Technology Trade	394
16.6	Regional Composition of Trade Within China	396
16.7	Conclusion	398
	Bibliography	399

17 Foreign Investment 401

17.1	FDI in the Chinese Economy	402
17.2	“Zones”: The Gradual Liberalization of the Investment Regime	406
17.3	The Investment Regime Today	410
17.4	Sources of Investment in China	413
17.5	The China Circle	416

17.6	FDI in Context	419
17.6.1	Sectoral Composition of FDI: The WTO Impact	419
17.6.2	Modes of Capital Inflow	420
17.7	Conclusion	422
	Bibliography	423

VI MACROECONOMICS AND FINANCE 425

18 Macroeconomic Trends and Cycles 427

18.1	Trends in National Saving	428
18.2	The Fiscal System and Fiscal Reform	430
18.2.1	Reversing Fiscal Erosion	433
18.2.2	Broadening the Tax Base: Horizontal Equity	433
18.2.3	Restructuring Central-Local Relations	434
18.3	The Fiscal System Today	436
18.3.1	Intergovernmental Fiscal Relations: Principles	436
18.3.2	Inadequacy of Local Government Revenue in Rural Areas	437
18.3.3	Extrabudgetary Funds, Levies, and Charges	438
18.3.4	Abolishing Local Taxes and Stepping Up Transfers	439
18.3.5	Arbitrary Nature of Transfers	440
18.4	Fiscal Deficits and Fiscal Policy	441
18.5	Inflation and Macroeconomic Cycles	442
18.6	Monetary Policy	444
18.7	Conclusion	445
	Bibliography	446

19 Financial System 449

19.1	The Financial System in the Planned Economy and under Reform	451
19.2	The Banking System	454
19.2.1	State-Owned Commercial Banks	454
19.2.2	Joint-Stock Commercial Banks	456
19.2.3	City Banks	457
19.2.4	Other Banks	457
19.2.4.1	Policy Banks	457
19.2.4.2	Rural Credit Cooperatives	458
19.2.4.3	The Fringe	458

19.2.5	Central Bank and Regulatory Apparatus	460
19.3	Weakness of the Banking System	460
19.3.1	Measures to Reduce the Stock of Nonperforming Loans	462
19.3.2	The “Flow” Problem: Ensuring Good Lending Decisions	464
19.3.3	Current Bank-Reform Program and Prospects for the Future	466
19.4	Stock Markets: Learning to Crawl?	467
19.4.1	Birth of the Market: Raising Funds for the State Sector	468
19.4.2	Characteristics of the Market	469
19.4.2.1	Circulating and Noncirculating Shares	469
19.4.2.2	Low Contestability	471
19.4.2.3	Rationing of Listing Opportunities	471
19.4.2.4	Thin Markets	471
19.4.2.5	Weak Disclosure and Regulation; Multiple Related-Party Transactions	472
19.4.2.6	Policy-Driven Market	473
19.4.2.7	Insider Control and Manipulation	473
19.4.3	Reform Initiatives: Selling Down the State Share: Changing the “Split Share Structure”	474
19.4.4	Institutional Investors	475
19.4.5	Comparative Evaluation of China’s Stock Market	476
19.5	Bond Markets	477
19.6	Other Financial Markets	478
19.7	Conclusion	478
	Bibliography	481

VII CONCLUSION: CHINA’S FUTURE 485

20 Environmental Quality and the Sustainability of Growth 487

20.1	Pollution	489
20.1.1	Air Pollution	490
20.1.2	Water Pollution	491
20.1.3	Costs of Pollution	493
20.1.4	Pollution Control	494

20.2	Sustainability	495
20.2.1	Broad Impact of Pollution and Global Warming	495
20.2.2	Sustainability of Land and Water Resources	497
20.2.2.1	Desertification	498
20.2.2.2	Forests and Grasslands	499
20.2.2.3	Water Availability	500
20.3	Conclusion	502
	Bibliography	503
	Index	505