1. Introduction

Knowledge and best practice in this field are constantly changing. As new research and evidence broaden our understanding, changes in research methods, professional practices, or medical treatment may become necessary.

Practitioners and researchers must always rely on their own experience and knowledge in evaluating and using any information, methods, compounds, or devices described in this book. In using such information or methods they should be mindful of their own safety and the safety of others, including parties for whom they have assumed responsibility.

With respect to any drug or pharmaceutical products identified, readers are advised to check the most current information provided (i) in procedures manuals or (ii) by the manufacturer of each product to be administered, to verify the recommended dose, formulation, and administration, and contraindications. It is the responsibility of the practitioner to use their own experience and knowledge of their patients to make a diagnosis and to take all appropriate steps to ensure the best treatment for each individual patient, and to take all appropriate steps to ensure the safety of the patient.

To the fullest extent of the law, neither the Publisher nor the authors, contributors, or editors, assume any liability for any injury and/or damage to persons or property as a result of any ideas or instructions contained in this material.
