

Contents

Lists of Tables, Figures and Boxes	viii
Acknowledgements	ix
1 Introduction – Making Local Governance Work	1
From Theory to practice	2
Making connections – new roles and relationships	3
The structure of the book	6
2 Issues in Local Governance	11
From government to governance	11
Changing context – changing expectations	15
The changing purpose of governance	17
Public value	18
Legitimacy and accountability	21
Emerging roles for governance networks	24
What do we mean by local?	26
The emergence of the neighbourhood	28
Centre, region, local and neighbourhood	31
3 Local Governance and Communities	34
What is consultation for?	39
Who is consultation with?	41
Engaging with government	43
The nature of the relationship	46
Response fatigue	49
The romance of civil society	50
1960–2000: from community development to social capital	52
Revisiting theory	57
Exclusion and inequality	59
Rules of engagement	61
4 The Relationship Organisation	63
Emerging organisational forms	64
Abandoning the machine metaphor	65
The recent past – evolving local authorities	67
Changes in other public organisations	71

The importance of organisational forms	73
The limits to structural change	74
Systems	75
Managing change	77
Opportunities and constraints – the inevitability of unintended consequences	80
The creation of hybrids	82
The relationship organisation	84
The challenge of information technology	87
New forms for public organisations?	87
Alternative models for local governance?	89
5 Networks and Partnerships	91
Pressures towards cross-boundary working	91
Experience elsewhere	93
Are partnerships or networks working?	94
Practical solutions at the local level	97
We've heard all this before ...	100
Making sense of cross-boundary working	101
Systems thinking	103
Underlying forces in partnership working	105
Are we experiencing a paradigm shift?	112
Rules of engagement for partnerships	113
6 Politics and Politicians	117
The democratic deficit	118
Old town hall structures	120
Changing the structures of local politics	123
Real and imaginary structures	126
Political systems	128
Political culture	130
New roles and relationships	133
Real and imaginary community leaders	136
7 Why is Change so Hard?	138
Changing organisations	141
The manager as hero	141
The problem with culture	144
Attitudes, behaviour and identity	147
The public manager as hero?	148
The role of the professional	149

The public servant	151
The emotionally committed worker	151
The specificity of the public service	152
Multiple sources of power – multiple sources of identity	154
8 Learning and Unlearning in Public Organisations	159
Management learning – from competent manager to explorer	159
Civic entrepreneurship	161
Managing risk	162
Managing legitimacy	162
Professionals	163
The limits to training	165
Theories of learning	166
Learning and unlearning	168
Learning organisations	174
Network learning	178
9 Learning and Unlearning in Civil Society	181
Political learning	181
New roles in governance	186
Learning in communities	189
Is there a new politics?	196
10 Conclusion	200
Emerging examples of practice	202
The need for diversity	207
Looking into the future	207
The role of central government?	208
Bibliography	211
Index	219