

Contents

Preface	ix
1. Vulnerability, dependence, animality	1
2. Humans as contrasted with, humans as included in the class of animals	11
3. The intelligence of dolphins	21
4. Can animals without language have beliefs?	29
5. How impoverished is the world of the nonhuman animal?	43
6. Reasons for action	53
7. Vulnerability, flourishing, goods, and 'good'	63
8. How do we become independent practical reasoners? How do the virtues make this possible?	81
9. Social relationships, practical reasoning, common goods, and individual goods	99
10. The virtues of acknowledged dependence	119
11. The political and social structures of the common good	129
12. Proxies, friends, truthfulness	147
13. Moral commitment and rational enquiry	155
Index	167