

Contents

Introduction	1
On the Subjective/Empathic Tradition	2
On Being a Therapist and Teaching Psychotherapy at the Turn of the Century	4
Organization	7
Chapter One: The Relationship between Case Formulation and Psychotherapy	9
Basic Premises	11
Goals of Traditional Psychoanalytic Therapy	12
Case Formulation for Therapeutic Rather Than Research Purposes	25
Summary	28
Chapter Two: Orientation to Interviewing	29
My Own Style of Initial Interviewing	30
Concluding Comments	45
Summary	47
Chapter Three: Assessing What Cannot Be Changed	48
Temperament	49
Genetic, Congenital, and Medical Conditions with Direct Psychological Effects	52
Irreversible Consequences of Head Trauma, Illness, and Toxicity	53
Unchangeable Physical Realities	56
Unchangeable Life Circumstances	58
Personal History	61
Summary	63

Chapter Four: Assessing Developmental Issues	65
Some Cautionary and Orienting Comments on Psychoanalytic Developmental Theory	66
Classical and Post-Freudian Developmental Models and Their Clinical Applications	73
Summary	83
Chapter Five: Assessing Defense	85
Clinical versus Research Considerations in Assessment of Defense	87
Characterological versus Situational Defensive Reactions	90
Clinical Implications of Assessing Defense	92
Summary	101
Chapter Six: Assessing Affects	102
Affects in the Transference/Countertransference Field	105
Affect States as Presenting Problems	108
Evaluating the Diagnostic Meaning of Affect	110
Therapeutic Implications of Getting It Right about Affect	116
Summary	121
Chapter Seven: Assessing Identifications	122
Identifications Suggested by Transference Reactions	123
Identification, Incorporation, Introjection, and Intersubjective Influencing	124
Clinical Implications of Understanding Identifications	129
Clinical Possibilities Where Counteridentification Predominates	132
Ethnic, Religious, Racial, Cultural, and Subcultural Identifications	135
Summary	138
Chapter Eight: Assessing Relational Patterns	139
Relational Themes in the Transference	143
Relational Themes outside the Therapy Situation	152
Implications of Relational Patterns for Long-Term versus Short-Term Therapies	155
Summary	156
Chapter Nine: Assessing Self-Esteem	158
The Significance of Understanding Self-Esteem Issues	158
Psychoanalytic Attention to Self-Esteem	161
Clinical Implications of Assessing Self-Esteem	166
Summary	179

Chapter Ten: Assessing Pathogenic Beliefs	180
The Nature and Function of Pathogenic Beliefs	181
Developing Hypotheses about Pathogenic Beliefs	186
Clinical Implications of Understanding Pathogenic Beliefs	190
Summary	199
Concluding Comments	200
Some Final Advice	208
Appendix: Sample Contract	210
References	212
Author Index	231
Subject Index	235