

Contents

List of figures	page ix
List of tables	x
Introduction. The reality of Russia	1
The meaning of order	2
A partly transformed society	4
1 A disorderly legacy	16
Disorderly rule under many regimes	17
The disorderly creation of the Russian Federation	24
An economy with too much money and not enough order	32
2 Democratization backwards	41
Creating modern and anti-modern states	43
Realizing the democratic potential of modern states	51
Contrasts in post-Communist contexts	53
Alternative outcomes	58
3 What Russians have made of transformation	61
How good were the good old days?	62
Coping with a disorderly society	66
Regimes: matching supply and demand	74
4 Presidential succession: a Family problem	82
A feeble state: Yeltsin's second term	83
Searching for a third alternative	91
Bombshells – metaphorical and otherwise	94
5 Parties without accountability	101
Four systems of parties	103
Why Duma elections matter	109
Scrambling to form parties	111
6 A floating system of parties	118
Getting on the ballot	119
Competing to fill a vacuum	123
Multiple outcomes	130

7	Impact of transformation on Duma voters	141
	Transformation influences	143
	Ideologies and party choice	147
	Equilibrium influences	150
	Transformation most important for party choice	157
8	From acting to elected president	164
	Laying on of hands	165
	Tying up a winning coalition	169
	Confirmation without campaigning	173
	Multiple influences on presidential choice	179
9	Campaigning and governing	187
	Winning the rating war	188
	Centralizing power	195
	Disciplining wild capitalism	203
	Going international – before and after September 11	205
	Putin's limited impact on Russians	211
10	In search of an equilibrium	218
	The rule of law in short supply	220
	An hourglass not a civil society	223
	An absence of accountability	227
	Matching supply and demand	231
	Settling down differently	238
	Appendix A New Russia Barometer samples	240
	Appendix B Coding of independent variables	242
	References	246
	Index	259