

Contents

Introduction	vii
1 Real life and classroom listening	1
1.1 Different types of understanding	1
1.2 Different listening situations	1
1.3 Establishing learners' priorities	2
1.4 Analysing different listening situations	3
1.5 Interactional and transactional speech	6
2 Different types of listening materials	8
2.1 Listening for oral production or for comprehension	8
2.2 Extensive and intensive listening	9
2.3 Recorded and live listening	11
2.4 Authentic and specially constructed materials	13
3 How to get the materials you need	16
3.1 Buying published material	16
3.2 Adapting published material	17
3.3 Making your own material	19
3.4 Live performances	25
4 Psycholinguistic theory and its implications for teaching listening	28
4.1 The interdependence of different skills in listening	28
4.2 Separating or integrating listening skills in teaching	32
4.3 Narrowing the options	32
4.4 Memory and listening	34

5	The sound of English — the learner's fears and difficulties	36
5.1	Listening — the hardest skill to master?	36
5.2	Teachers' and students' views of listening	36
5.3	Listening difficulties stemming from pronunciation	37
5.4	Implicit or explicit teaching?	43
6	More about sound — tone of voice, stress and intonation	48
6.1	Tone of voice	48
6.2	Stress and intonation	48
7	Assessing the difficulty of listening passages	56
7.1	Type of delivery	58
7.2	Density of information	59
7.3	Complexity of text	60
7.4	Number of speakers	62
7.5	Familiarity of subject matter	62
8	Planning a listening lesson	63
8.1	The phases of a listening lesson	63
8.2	Pre-listening	64
8.3	While-listening	68
8.4	Follow-up	72
9	Running a listening lesson	74
9.1	Variety of exercises and passages	74
9.2	Helping students to see the reasons behind exercises	75
9.3	Observing students' reactions	76
9.4	Allowing students time to reconsider	76

9.5	Preventing panic	79
10	Listening exercises — listening for the message and information	81
10.1	Using charts	82
10.2	Using pictures	83
10.3	Different types of tasks based on the message	88
11	Listening exercises — grammar and vocabulary in listening work	97
11.1	Pre-listening work	98
11.2	Follow-up work	103
12	Listening exercises — exercises to help students cope with the sound of English	106
12.1	Indirect practice — pre-listening	106
12.2	Indirect practice — post-listening	109
12.3	Practice needing some special training	111
13	Planning listening into your language programme	112
13.1	Integrating listening into your main course	112
13.2	Integrating listening with other language skills	117
14	Encouraging students to listen by themselves	121
14.1	Self-access work	121
14.2	Autonomy for the students	126
14.3	Listening outside the school	128
	Appendix	131
	Further Reading	133
	Coursebooks	134
	Index	135