

Contents

Foreword by Howard B. Altman vii

introduction 1

Part I Basic issues in self-instruction:
introduction 4

- 1 What is self-instruction? 5
 - 1.1 Some examples 5
 - 1.2 Terminology and definitions 8
 - 1.3 An overview of the book 15
 - 1.4 Conclusion 16
- 2 Why self-instruction? 18
 - 2.1 Practical reasons 18
 - 2.2 Individual differences among learners 18
 - 2.3 Educational aims 23
 - 2.4 Motivation 29
 - 2.5 Learning how to learn foreign languages 33
 - 2.6 Conclusion 35

Part II Facilitating learning: introduction 36

- 3 Self-instructional systems 43
 - 3.1 Systems used for adult learners 43
 - 3.2 Schemes at school level 58
 - 3.3 Conclusion 67
- 4 Materials for self-instruction 68
 - 4.1 Authentic texts used directly by the learner 68
 - 4.2 Commercially available materials 69
 - 4.3 Materials written specially for self-instruction 79
 - 4.4 Conclusion 87
- 5 Supporting the learner in self-instruction 88
 - 5.1 The analysis of learners' needs 88

Contents

5.2	Learner contracts	98
5.3	Other ways of supporting learners	102
5.4	Conclusion	104
6	Self-access resources	106
6.1	Functions of a self-access resource	106
6.2	Physical organisation	108
6.3	Classification and indexing systems	110
6.4	Introduction to the resources	115
6.5	The operation of the system	118
6.6	Evaluation	119
6.7	Conclusion	120
7	Preparing for self-instruction	121
7.1	Types of preparation	121
7.2	Preparing teachers	122
7.3	Preparing adult learners	125
7.4	Preparing school learners	132
7.5	Conclusion	133
8	Self-assessment	134
8.1	Justification for self-assessment	136
8.2	The range of self-assessment	137
8.3	The feasibility of self-assessment	149
8.4	Conclusion	151
Conclusion		152
Appendices
Appendix A	Preparation in the completion of contracts	155
Appendix B	Preparation of teachers	158
Appendix C(I)	Techniques for psychological and methodological preparation of learners	163
Appendix C(II)	The Standard Reading Exercise	170
Appendix C(III)	The Standard Listening Exercise	172
Appendix D(I)	Examples of self-assessment techniques	175
Appendix D(II)	Self- and peer-assessment of composition	187
Bibliography		190
Acknowledgements		195
Index		196