Contents

Preface

1 The nature and purpose of writing

1.1 What is writing?
1.2 What do we write?
1.3 Speech and writing
1.4 Why writing is difficult
1.5 Learning to write: mother tongue and foreign language situations compared 1.6 Why teach writing?
Discussion/Exercises/References

2 Learning to use the resources of the written language

2.1 Understanding how the written language functions
2.2 The resources of the written language
Discussion/Exercises/References

3 General principles for teaching writing

3.1 Approaches to teaching writing
3.2 The state of the art
3.3 The role of guidance
3.4 The needs of the learners
Discussion/Exercises/References

4 Writing in the early stages

4.1 Some basic considerations
4.2 Copying as a writing activity
4.3 Reinforcement activities
4.4 Sentence linking activities
4.5 Communication activities
4.6 Writing for fun
Discussion/Exercises/References

5 Developing skills

5.1 The importance of demonstrating progress
5.2 Reinforcement activities
5.3 Sentence linking and sequencing activities
5.4 Reproduction exercises
5.5 Communication activities
5.6 Writing for fun
Discussion/Exercises/References

6 Contexts for writing: the use of texts

6.1 The text as context
6.2 Comprehension activities
6.3 Note-taking and summarising
Discussion/Exercises/References

7 Contexts for writing: the use of visual material

7.1 Some general considerations
7.2 The role of the teacher
7.3 The use of visual material: some examples
Discussion/Exercises/References

8 Integrated skills

8.1 The importance of integrating skills
8.2 Project work
8.3 Skill sequences
8.4 Simulations as a framework for writing activities
Discussion/Exercises/References

9 Writing at the post-intermediate level

9.1 Problem areas
9.2 Remedial work: the value of a functional approach
9.3 Free writing: some suggested procedures
Discussion/Exercises/References

10 Correcting written work

10.1 Errors and mistakes
10.2 Teacher and student correction
10.3 Correction procedures
Discussion/Exercises/References

11 Writing activities for children

11.1 Reasons for teaching writing
11.2 Writing activities
Discussion/Exercises/References

12 Teaching the English script

12.1 The needs of the learners
12.2 Letter shapes
12.3 Procedures for teaching script
Discussion/Exercises/References

Appendix: Cohesive devices

Bibliography

Index