

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	ix
Highlights for 2018	1
Introduction: Better Inequality Data for a More Informed Democratic Debate	17
PART I The WID.world Project	21
1 The Measurement of Economic Inequality	23
PART II Trends in Global Income Inequality	37
2 Global Income Inequality Dynamics	39
3 Trends in Income Inequality between Countries	60
4 Trends in Income Inequality within Countries	70
5 Income Inequality in the United States	83
6 Income Inequality in France	100
7 Income Inequality in Germany	110
8 Income Inequality in China	116
9 Income Inequality in Russia	124
10 Income Inequality in India	136
11 Income Inequality in the Middle East	145
12 Income Inequality in Brazil	154
13 Income Inequality in South Africa	162
PART III Public versus Private Capital Dynamics	169
14 Wealth-Income Ratios across the World	171
15 The Evolution of Aggregate Wealth-Income in Developed Countries	182
16 Comparing the Experiences of Former Communist States	193
17 Capital Accumulation, Private Property, and Rising Inequality in China	201
18 The Rise of Private Property in Russia	209

PART IV Trends in Global Wealth Inequality	217
19 Global Wealth Inequality: Trends and Projections	219
20 Comparing Trends in Personal Wealth Inequality across the World	228
21 Wealth Inequality in the United States	236
22 Wealth Inequality in France	244
23 Wealth Inequality in Spain	257
24 Wealth Inequality in the UK	269
PART V Tackling Economic Inequality	277
25 What is the Future of Global Income Inequality?	279
26 Tackling Rising Inequality at the Top: The Role of Progressive Taxation	286
27 Tax Policy in a Global Environment: The Case for a Global Financial Register	294
28 Tackling Inequality at the Bottom: The Need for More Equal Access to Education and Good-Paying Jobs	299
29 A Message from the Past: Let Governments Invest in the Future	310
Conclusion	317
Appendix	321
Notes	325