

Content

Peter Opitz, Zurich

|                   |   |
|-------------------|---|
| Preface . . . . . | 5 |
|-------------------|---|

Emidio Campi

|                                               |   |
|-----------------------------------------------|---|
| Was the Reformation a German Event? . . . . . | 9 |
|-----------------------------------------------|---|

Ignasi Fernández Terricabras

|                                                                                            |    |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| “As Spanish as it was Ecumenical”. Was the Catholic Reformation a Spanish Event? . . . . . | 32 |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|

Piotr Wilczek

|                                                                     |    |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| The “Myth” of the Polish Reformation in Modern Historiography . . . | 59 |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------|----|

Rodney L. Petersen

|                                                                     |    |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| The Apocalyptic Luther – Exegesis and Self-Identification . . . . . | 71 |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------|----|

Barbara Mahlmann-Bauer

|                                                                                                   |    |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| Zeugnisse frühneuzeitlicher Konvertiten – Definitionen, Klassifikation und Textanalysen . . . . . | 92 |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|

Aurelio A. García Archilla

|                                                                                                                                                                                     |     |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Non multos : Patterns of Conversion or State Sponsorship?Correlations of the Reformation with Early Christianity andContemporary Evangelical Conversionism . . . . . | 124 |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|

Frank van der Pol

|                                                                                                                                                                                 |     |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| ‘Reformation’ and ‘Reformers’, a 17th-Century ApproachThe Profile and Use of two Fundamental Concepts in Some Worksof the Dutch Reformed Pietist Simon Oomius . . . . . | 139 |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|

Jordan J. Ballor

|                                                                      |     |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| State, Church, and the Reformational Roots of Subsidiarity . . . . . | 148 |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|

Jon Balserak

|                                                            |     |
|------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Examining the Myth of Calvin as a Lover of Order . . . . . | 160 |
|------------------------------------------------------------|-----|

Paul W. Roberts

The Politics of Piety: Pierre Viret, William Farel, and the Genevan Consistory as an Early Test-Case for a Unifying Theme in Viret's Theology . . . . . 176

Daniël Timmerman

The Myth of the Reformed Pastor?
Continuity and Change in Heinrich Bullinger's use of 1Corinthians 14 . 190

Rasmus H.C. Dreyer

An Apologia for Luther
The Myth of the Danish Luther: Danish Reformer Hans Tausen and "A short Answer" (1528/29) . . . . . 211

Hendrik Klinge

Jacob Schegks „De una persona“ (1565) und der Mythos der frühen lutherischen Christologie . . . . . 233

Arnold Huijgen

Divine Accommodation in Calvin: Myth and Reality . . . . . 248

Pál Ács

Thomas Cranmer's Martyrdom as Parable
Hungarian Adaptation in Verse of John Foxe's Martyrology by Mihály Sztárai (1560) . . . . . 260

Rainer Kobe

Die „Confessio“ des Thomas von Imbroich, niederrheinisch/kölnischer Täufer und Märtyrer (1558) . . . . . 276

Christine Christ-von Wedel

Bilderverbot und Bibelillustrationen im reformierten Zürich . . . . . 299

Bridget Heal

The Catholic Eye and the Protestant Ear: the Reformation as a Non-Visual Event? . . . . . 321

Martin Wangsgaard Jürgensen

The Arts and Lutheran Church Decoration
Some Reflections on the Myth of Lutheran Images and Iconography . . 356

About the Authors . . . . . 381