

RURALIA 8

Contents – Inhalt – Sommaire

Jorge A. Eiroa Rodríguez Fortified granaries in southeastern al-Andalus	1-9
José M^a Martín Civantos The archaeology of irrigated spaces in southeast Spain during the medieval period	11-29
Guillermo García-Contreras Ruiz Production and use of salt in al-Andalus: A state of the art and a perspective on its study	31-43
Helena Kirchner Watermills in the Balearic Islands during the Muslim period	45-55
Philippe Mignot Greniers collectifs berbères. Une relecture entreprise sous la conduite de Johnny De Meulemeester	57-70
Paolo de Vingo Food preparation and preservation in north-west Italy: a comparative assessment in the study of early medieval eating and cooking utensils in the settlement of Sant'Antonino in western Liguria and the village of Trino Vercellese in the Po valley	71-89
Vianney Forest – Isabelle Rodet-Belarbi Viandes animales dans le Languedoc-Roussillon rural médiéval : bilan 2010	91-112
Sophie Gilotte – Sidonie Preiss Le grenier médiéval d'Aschères-le-Marché : structures de stockage et indices carpologiques d'une petite unité agricole du centre de la France (Loiret)	113-126
Dominique Allios Les poteries et leurs fonctions dans l'alimentation médiévale	127-136
Niall Brady Food production in medieval Ireland, aspects of arable husbandry	137-143
Richard Jones Elemental theory in everyday practice: food disposal in the later medieval English countryside	145-154
Piers Dixon Of bannocks and ale: cereal processing in Scotland, c. 1100-1750	155-172
Natascha Mehler From self-sufficiency to external supply and famine: Foodstuffs, their preparation and storage in Iceland ...	173-186
Bert J. Groenewoudt The visibility of storage	187-197
Jan van Doesburg Archaeological evidence for pest control in medieval rural settlements in the Netherlands	199-211
Mette Svart Kristiansen Fish for peasants and kings – a Danish perspective	213-218
Bi Skaarup Gastronomic archaeology. How to unearth the culinary relations in our finds	219-223
Ingvild Øye Food and technology – Cooking utensils and food processing in medieval Norway	225-234

Karin Viklund
Beer brewing in medieval Sweden – archaeobotanical and documentary evidence	235–243
Mika Sarkkinen
Fishing in the wilderness – Examples of peasant food management in northern Finland	245–254
Elisabeth Marti-Grädel – Richard Frosdick
Archaeozoological studies of the medieval food supply in north-western Switzerland.	255–270
Benno Furrer
Nothing for mice to laugh. About traditional buildings and facilities for food storage	271–283
Thomas Meier
A farewell to the market! Constructing a Carolingian subsistence economy east of the Rhine	285–300
Rainer Schreg
Feeding the village – Reflections on the ecology and resilience of the medieval rural economy	301–320
Birte Heltzmann
Rural economies in urban situations: production, processing and storage of food	321–333
Susanne Arnold – Manfred Rösch
Verbreitung, Verteilung und Lagerung von Lebensmitteln unter dem Aspekt von ländlichem und städtischem Nahrungsangebot – eine naturwissenschaftliche und archäologische Betrachtung aus dem Südwesten Deutschlands	335–357
Stefan Blum
Granaries in the Black Forest	359–367
Sabine Felgenhauer-Schmiedt
Anbau, Ernährung und Aufbewahrung im bäuerlichen Milieu Niederösterreichs – verschiedene Quellen, verschiedene Aussagen.	369–379
Mária Béres
Getreidespeichergruben des 10.–13. Jahrhunderts im Karpatenbecken.	381–389
Edit Sárosi
Hungarian grey cattle on the European market between the 15 th and 17 th century.	391–398
Csilla Zatykó
Aspects of fishing in medieval Hungary	399–408
Krzysztof Fokt – Jerzy Piekalski
Current problems of research on production, processing, storage and distribution of food in the medieval rural environment of Lower Silesia	409–420
Dagmar Winklerová
Zooarchaeological and archaeobotanical indicators for aspects of diet in medieval Kingdom of Bohemia	421–429
Terry Barry
Conclusions	431–433