

Contents

Table of Cases	xi
Table of Treaties	xix
Table of Other Materials	xxv
List of Abbreviations	xxix
1. Introduction	1
1.1 Setting the Scene: The Mainstream Approach to International Legal Personality	1
1.2 The Argument	5
1.3 Preliminary Caveats, Definitions, and Assumptions	6
1.3.1 Individuals	7
1.3.2 International law and domestic law	7
1.3.3 Primary rules and secondary rules	9
1.4 Guide to the Reader	10
2. International Legal Personality as a Theoretical Construct	14
2.1 International Legal Personality before the Twentieth Century	16
2.2 ‘States Are the Only International Legal Persons’	17
2.2.1 ‘States may confer derivative international legal personality on non-State entities, but there is a presumption against it’	20
2.3 ‘The International Legal Personality of Any Entity Depends Solely on the Content of an International Norm Addressing It’	23
2.4 ‘The Individual Human Being Is the Ultimate International Legal Person’	30
2.5 ‘There Are No International Legal Persons—Only Participants in the International Legal Order’	37
2.6 Conclusion: International Legal Personality as a Theoretical Construct	43
3. The Personality of Individuals in Positive International Law—General Issues	47
3.1 The Application of Treaties to Individuals	48
3.1.1 The Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties	48
3.1.2 The PCIJ and the ICJ	49
3.1.2.1 1920: Drafting the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice	49
3.1.2.2 PCIJ and ICJ practice on individual rights and obligations under treaties	51
3.1.2.2.1 PCIJ 1928: Jurisdiction of the Courts of Danzig	52
3.1.2.2.2 ICJ 2001: LaGrand	56
3.1.2.2.3 ICJ 2004: Wall	57
3.1.2.2.4 ICJ 2010: Kosovo	58

3.2 The Application of Customary International Law to Individuals	60
3.2.1 The High Court of International Justice proposed to the Advisory Committee of Jurists	60
3.3 The Doctrine of Diplomatic Protection	62
3.3.1 A legal fiction: Whose rights are being asserted?	63
3.3.1.1 Classification of claims: The ICJ's 2004 Judgment in Avena	66
3.3.2 Diplomatic protection and the international legal personality of individuals	68
3.3.2.1 The exhaustion of local remedies rule	68
3.3.2.2 The future of diplomatic protection	69
3.4 Treaty Interpretation: Individual Rights or Obligations?	70
3.4.1 Individual rights vs human rights	71
3.4.2 The VCLT rules on treaty interpretation	72
3.4.3 Examples of treaty interpretation: individual rights or obligations?	73
3.4.3.1 Individual rights	74
3.4.3.2 Individual obligations	75
3.4.3.3 Other non-State entities	76
3.5 Conclusion: The Personality of Individuals in Positive International Law—General Issues	76
4. The Legal Personality of Individuals in International Claims	79
4.1 International Claims before the First World War	80
4.1.1 Early international claims practice	80
4.1.1.1 The International Prize Court	81
4.1.1.2 The Central American Court of Justice	83
4.2 International Claims in the Interwar Period	85
4.2.1 Arbitration of distinct claims	86
4.2.2 Post-First World War tribunals and commissions	87
4.2.2.1 Mixed Arbitral Tribunals established by the Peace Treaties	87
4.2.2.2 The US Mixed Claims Commissions	88
4.2.2.3 Upper Silesia Arbitral Tribunal and Mixed Commission	89
4.2.3 The Mexican Revolution Commissions	91
4.3 International Claims after the Second World War	94
4.3.1 Post-Second World War tribunals and commissions	94
4.3.1.1 Germany	94
4.3.1.2 Italy and Japan	95
4.3.2 Iran–United States Claims Tribunal	96
4.3.3 Three recent examples of international claims commissions	99
4.3.3.1 The United Nations Compensation Commission	99
4.3.3.2 Commission for Real Property Claims of Displaced Persons and Refugees	100
4.3.3.3 Eritrea–Ethiopia Claims Commission	101
4.4 Conclusion: The Legal Personality of Individuals in International Claims	102

5. The Legal Personality of Individuals in International Humanitarian Law	104
5.1 The Law of International Armed Conflict before the Second World War	105
5.1.1 The Law of The Hague	105
5.1.1.1 The Martens Clause	108
5.1.2 The Law of Geneva	109
5.2 The Law of International Armed Conflict after the Second World War	110
5.2.1 The Geneva Conventions of 1949	110
5.2.2 Additional Protocol I of 1977	114
5.3 The Law of Non-International Armed Conflict before the Second World War	115
5.3.1 Recognition of belligerency	116
5.4 The Law of Non-International Armed Conflict after the Second World War	120
5.4.1 Common Article 3 of the Geneva Conventions	120
5.4.2 Additional Protocol II of 1977	124
5.4.3 The bindingness of the law of non-international armed conflict on armed opposition groups	125
5.4.3.1 The bindingness of customary international law	126
5.4.3.2 The bindingness of treaties on third parties	127
5.4.3.3 The bindingness of treaties by control over a particular territory	129
5.4.3.4 The principle of legislative jurisdiction	130
5.5 Customary International Humanitarian Law	131
5.6 Conclusion: The Legal Personality of Individuals in International Humanitarian Law	132
6. The Legal Personality of Individuals in International Criminal Law	135
6.1 International Criminal Law before the Second World War	136
6.1.1 Precedents of international criminal law	136
6.1.2 The interwar years: Prosecutions under the Versailles Treaty	136
6.2 International Criminal Law after the Second World War	138
6.2.1 The IMT	140
6.2.2 The ILC's formulation of the Nürnberg Principles	141
6.2.3 The ICTY and the ICTR	145
6.2.3.1 The International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia	145
6.2.3.2 The International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda	147
6.2.4 The ICC	149
6.2.5 Does individual responsibility for international crimes arise a priori or a posteriori?	151
6.3 What Defines an International Criminal Court?	153
6.3.1 The legal nature of the London Agreement and the IMT Charter	153
6.3.2 The definition of an international criminal court in post-Second World War scholarship	156

6.3.3 The SCSL	160
6.3.4 The ECCC	162
6.4 Conclusion: The Legal Personality of Individuals in International Criminal Law	164
7. The Legal Personality of Individuals in International Human Rights Law	167
7.1 International Human Rights Law before the Second World War	167
7.1.1 The abolition of slavery	168
7.1.2 Minorities protection	169
7.2 International Human Rights Law after the Second World War: The Example of the ECHR	172
7.2.1 The procedural status of individuals before the ECtHR	173
7.2.2 Special rules of interpretation for human rights treaties?	179
7.2.2.1 The ECHR drafting process	179
7.2.2.2 The practice of the Court	180
7.2.3 The ECHR in the international legal system	186
7.3 Conclusion: The Legal Personality of Individuals in International Human Rights Law	190
8. The Legal Personality of Individuals in International Economic Law	194
8.1 State Contracts	196
8.1.1 The nature of State contracts	196
8.1.2 The law applicable to State contracts	198
8.2 International Investment Law	202
8.2.1 The International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes	203
8.2.2 Primary rules of international investment law	205
8.2.2.1 Countermeasures as a circumstance precluding wrongfulness	210
8.2.3 Secondary rules of international investment law	212
8.2.3.1 The power of investors to waive international arbitration	215
8.3 European Union Law	219
8.3.1 The right of individuals to petition the CJEU	219
8.3.2 A new legal order?	221
8.4 Conclusion: The Legal Personality of Individuals in International Economic Law	227
9. Conclusion	230
Bibliography	237
Index	263