

Contents

Preface	ix
Note on the Translation	xvii
Introduction: Against "Ethical Abstinence"	1
I. An Ensemble of Practices: Forms of Life as Social Formations	33
1. What Is a Form of Life?	35
1.1. Form of Life: Concept and Phenomenon	35
1.2. Duration, Depth, Scope	42
1.3. A Modular Concept of Forms of Life	50
2. Forms of Life as Inert Ensembles of Practices	55
2.1. What Are (Social) Practices?	56
2.2. The Interconnected Character of Practices	62
2.3. The Moment of Inertia	73
2.4. Practice, Criticism, Reflection	83
II. Solutions to Problems: Forms of Life as Normatively Constituted Formations	85
3. The Normativity of Forms of Life	89
3.1. Norms and Normativity	91
3.2. Modes of Normativity	96

3.3. Three Types of Norm Justification	105
3.4. Lack of Correspondence with Its Concept	118
4. Forms of Life as Problem-Solving Entities	133
4.1. What Are Problems?	134
4.2. Given or Made? The Problem with Problems	139
4.3. Attempts at Problem-Solving: Hegel's Theory of the Family	145
4.4. Crises of Problem-Solving	153
4.5. Second Order Problems	163
 III. Forms of Criticism	 173
5. What Is Internal Criticism?	177
5.1. External and Internal Criticism	177
5.2. The Strategy of Internal Criticism	179
5.3. Advantages and Limits of Internal Criticism	183
6. "To Find the New World through Criticism of the Old One": Immanent Criticism	190
6.1. Criticism of a New Type	191
6.2. The Strategy of Immanent Criticism	195
6.3. Potentials and Difficulties	208
 IV. The Dynamics of Crisis and the Rationality of Social Change	 215
7. Successful and Failed Learning Processes	221
7.1. Change, Development, Learning, Progress	221
7.2. Are Forms of Life Capable of Learning?	226
7.3. Deficient Learning Processes	230
7.4. Why Does History Matter?	233
8. Crisis-Induced Transformations: Dewey, MacIntyre, Hegel	237
8.1. Social Change as Experimental Problem-Solving	238
8.2. The Dynamics of Traditions	240
8.3. History as a Dialectical Learning Process	243
9. Problem or Contradiction?	246
9.1. Problems as Indeterminateness	247
9.2. Crisis as a Break in Continuity	250

9.3. Crisis as Dialectical Contradiction	255
9.4. The Problem with Contradiction	265
10. The Dynamics of Learning Processes	272
10.1. Problem-Solving as an Experimental Learning Process	274
10.2. The Dynamics of Traditions	286
10.3. The Source of Progress and of Degeneration	290
10.4. A Dialectical-Pragmatist Understanding of Learning Processes	299
Conclusion: A Critical Theory of Criticism of Forms of Life	315
Notes	321
Index	383