

Contents

Foreword 1993	Robbie Davis-Floyd	ix
Preface to the Fourth Edition 1993		xi
Preface to the Third Edition 1983		xv
Acknowledgments to Part I		xix
About the Author		xxi

Part I: Childbirth in Biosocial, Crosscultural Perspective 1

1	A Biosocial Framework for the Crosscultural Comparison of Childbirth Practices	3
	Obstacles to Crosscultural Comparison	6
	The Fieldwork Sequence	9
	Anthropological Participation	10
	Preview of Book	12
2	Buscando La Forma
	An Ethnography of Contemporary Maya Childbirth in Yucatan	15
	The Ethnographic Record	15
	Fieldwork Conditions	16
	The Birth Setting	22
	Prenatal Care	24
	The Birth Event	31
	The Postpartum Period	42
3	The Crosscultural Comparison of Birthing Systems Toward A Biosocial Analysis	45
	Birth in the United States, Holland, and Sweden:
	An Overview	46
	Biosocial Features of Birth	48
	Conclusion	90

4	Fieldwork in Four Cultures Methods and Experience	91
	Beginning Fieldwork	93
	The Technologies of Data Gathering	100
	The Anthropological “Interview”	102
	Why We Need a Visual Record	104
	Disadvantages of Mechanical Data Recording	109
	Dilemmas and Interference	111
	Women and Birth Research	119
5	Birth Systems and Change	121
	Systemic Structure and Systematic Justification	122
	Birth Systems and Change in Developing Countries	128
	Mutual Accommodation:
	A Biosocial Framework for Planning Change	132
	The Shape of Things to Come:
	Birth in the United States	139

Part II: Authoritative Knowledge in Childbirth	147
---	------------

6	The Achievement of Authoritative Knowledge in an American Hospital Birth	151
	Authoritative Knowledge	152
	The Data	154
	Some Thoughts About the Design of Labor Ecologies	166
7	Modes of Teaching and Learning Pedagogy and the Construction of Authoritative Knowledge	169
	Generic Problems in Training Courses	172
	Differing Worldviews	184
	Differing Modes of Knowledge Acquisition:
	Experiential and Didactic	186
	Conclusions: Cosmopolitics	196
8	Cosmopolitical Obstetrics Technology and the Social Distribution of Authoritative Knowledge	199
	Generic Problems in the Interaction of Indigenous and Western Obstetric Systems	200
	Obstetric Technology and Its Consequences	204
	Conclusion: Primary Health Care and Beyond	214
	References Cited	217