

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments xi

List of Abbreviations xiii

①

Syntactic Methodology and Universal Grammar 1

- 1.1 Approaches to Universal Grammar 1
- 1.2 Syntactic Tests and Domains of Application 6
- 1.3 Comparing the Two Methodologies 17
- 1.4 Preliminaries to This Study 32

②

The Cross-Linguistic Basis for Syntactic Categories 36

- 2.1 Background to the Problem 36
- 2.2 The Basic Correlations and Typological Markedness 51
- 2.3 Structural Markedness and the Semantic Prototypes 62
- 2.4 Behavioral Markedness and the Deverbalization Hierarchy 79
- 2.5 Textual Markedness 87
- 2.6 The Major Syntactic Categories as Universals and as Language-Specific Categories 93
- 2.7 Appendix: Semantic Classification of Lexical Roots 95

③

Toward an External Definition of Syntactic Categories 99

- 3.1 Introduction 99
- 3.2 Conceptualization, Pragmatics, and Discourse 101
- 3.3 Other Semantic Classes of Lexical Roots 126
- 3.4 Conclusion 146

④

Thematic Roles, Verbal Semantics, and Causal Structure 149

- 4.1 Introduction 149
- 4.2 Pragmatic and Conceptual Factors in Subject and Object Choice 150
- 4.3 Problems with Case (Thematic) Roles 155
- 4.4 Verbal Decomposition and the Individuation of Events 159
- 4.5 Conclusion 181

⑤

Case Marking and the Causal Order of Participants 183

- 5.1 Introduction 183
- 5.2 The Causal Order Hypothesis 184
- 5.3 Space and Causality 192
- 5.4 The Integration of Space and Possession into Causal Structure 198
- 5.5 Extension to the Rest of the Lexicon 212
- 5.6 The Subsequent-Antecedent Distinction in Other Grammatical Domains 228
- 5.7 Conclusion 236
- 5.8 Appendix: Table of Case Syncretisms 237

⑥

Verb Forms and the Conceptualization of Events 240

- 6.1 Applicatives, Causatives and Primary Objects 240
- 6.2 Passive Voice and Markedness Patterns in Causal Structures 247
- 6.3 Reflexive, Middle and Other "Voice" Constructions 255
- 6.4 What is a Possible Verb? 260

⑦

Conclusion 272

Notes 275

References 299

Indexes 317