

CONTENTS

acknowledgments	vii
preface	xi
PART I: A Way of Looking at Foreign Language Education
Chapter 1 One View of the Learner	3
2 One View of Teaching	16
PART II: One Way of Teaching: The Silent Way
Chapter 3 Some Basic Ideas behind the Silent Way	37
4 The Silent Way as a Method for Teaching Languages	43
5 Some of My Own Experiences in Using the Silent Way	52
6 The Silent Way in Honolulu	64
PART III: A Second Way: Counseling-Learning
Chapter 7 The Beginning of a Letter	85
8 Counseling, Counseling-Learning, and Community Language Learning	100
9 Can We Afford to Be Relevant?	117
10 On Going from One Language to Another: Some Firsthand Experiences	124
11 Some Uses of Cuisenaire Rods in Counseling-Learning	131
12 A Roller Coaster Ride to Swahililand (by Irene Dutra)	144
13 A One-Day Workshop with Community Language Learning	149
14 Community Language Learning in Honolulu	160
15 Community Language Learning in Two Very Different Settings (by Dieter Stroinigg and Betsy Bedell)	184
16 Materials for the Whole Learner	197
17 Contrasting Experiences with Counseling-Learning in Teaching with Verse (with a section by Dot Carhart)	213

PART IV: A Third Way: Suggestopedia

Chapter 18	The Work of Georgi Lozanov	229
19	Some Suggestopedic Ideas in Non-Suggestopedic Methods	244

PART V: Part I, Continued

Chapter 20	One Teacher's View of the Three "Ways"	263
21	The Monitor Model and the Levertov Machine	267
22	The Language Teacher and Dostoyevsky's "Grand Inquisitor"	283
epilog		297
bibliographies		298
index		301