

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Introduction	19
Chapter I. Definition of the subject	26
A. Initial focus and questions	26
B. The range of questions seeking answers	31
C. The historical setting in commercial arbitration	44
D. The historical setting in investment-treaty arbitration.	49
E. Corruption in cross-border commercial life	54
F. The intersection between corruption and law	58
Chapter II. The meaning of "illegality"	61
A. Overview of the problem of illegality in its different forms	61
1. Overtly illegal contracts	61
2. Illegality and lack of assent.	64
3. Illicit contracts and public versus private parties	66
4. Illegality ab initio versus ex post	67
B. Circumstances of the illegality	68
1. Initial awareness of the illegality by all parties	68
2. Subsequent awareness of the illegality by all parties	69
3. Illicit intention and awareness of one party	69
4. Reliance on the illegality as claim or defence	70
5. Contracts of bribery versus contracts arising out of bribery	70
C. Suspicion of illegality versus knowledge or obviousness of same	70
1. Maintaining impartiality and equal treatment	71
2. Dilatory tactics and allegations of illegality	72
3. Mutual denial of illegality	72
D. Initial attempts at definitions of "corruption" and "bribery"	73
E. International and transnational efforts to define "bribery"	75
F. The temporal dimension of illegality	81

G. Different national legislative approaches to the definition of illegality	92
1. "Facilitation payments", "speed money" and "grease payments"	92
2. Differences in the definition of elements of corrupt conduct	95
3. Differences in the dividing line between corrupt and non-corrupt intermediaries	97
H. Illegality and investment arbitration	103
Chapter III. The context of private international law versus public international law	106
A. Introduction	106
1. International commercial arbitration based on contractual privity.	106
2. International investment arbitration based on contractual privity.	109
3. International investment arbitration based on a BIT or MIT, without contractual privity	112
B. The meaning of public policy in international arbitration.	114
1. Limitations to party autonomy	114
2. The meaning and function of public policy in international arbitration.	116
3. The function of public policy in international arbitration generally.	121
(a) Public policy limitations to arbitration as a means of dispute settlement	123
(b) Public policy limitations to the applicable substantive and procedural law	128
(c) Public policy limitations to the existence and enforcement of an award	134
(i) Court practice in the United States	140
(ii) Court practice in France	143
(iii) Court practice in England.	144
(iv) Court practice in Germany	145
(v) Court practice in Switzerland.	146
4. The existence and role of public policy for the international arbitrator.	149
(a) The absence of a lex fori and the role of public policy	149

- (b) Criticism of an “international” or “transnational” public policy 151
 - (c) Rebuttal to the criticism of an “international” or “transnational” public policy . . 153
- 5. Corruption and bribery in public and private international law 155
 - (a) Prevailing opinion on bribery as a matter of customary law 156
 - (b) Widespread condemnation of bribery by tribunals 159
 - (c) Criticism of the existence of a transnational public policy prohibition against bribery 161
- Chapter IV. The question of the applicable law or laws 167
 - A. International commercial arbitration and the applicable law 167
 - 1. Lex contractus as manifestation of party autonomy 168
 - 2. Lex contractus, lex arbitri and the place of performance 169
 - 3. The connectedness of the law of place of performance 170
 - 4. Violation of universal public policy versus local public policy 174
 - B. International investment arbitration and the applicable law 181
 - 1. The autonomy of the parties to choose the law in international investment disputes . . 182
 - 2. Party autonomy and the law of the host State 185
 - 3. The law of the investor or the law of a third State 186
 - 4. The investment agreement as a self-contained legal system 187
 - 5. Rules of law versus bodies of law. 191
 - 6. The choice of “international law” 194
 - 7. International law as a component of domestic law 201
 - 8. International law in the “absence” of its choice by the parties. 204
 - 9. Consequences of non-application of proper law — nullity 212
 - 10. Corruption and illegality in an investment treaty-based choice of law. 218

C. Commercial versus investment arbitration: reconciling illegality and applicable law	222
Chapter V. Corruption allegations, suspicions, findings and admissions	224
A. The different contexts in which corruption plays a role	224
1. Overview of the problem of illegality in its different forms	224
2. Different kinds of illegality	225
(a) Overtly illegal contracts	225
(b) Illegality and lack of assent	227
(c) Illicit contracts and public versus private parties	230
(d) Illegality ab initio versus ex post	231
3. Different factual circumstances of illegality	231
(a) Initial awareness of the illegality by all parties	232
(b) Subsequent awareness of the illegality by all parties	232
(c) Illicit intention and awareness by only one party	233
(d) Reliance on the illegality as a claim or defence	233
(e) Contracts of bribery versus contracts arising out of bribery	234
4. Suspicion of illegality versus knowledge or obviousness of the same	234
(a) Maintaining impartiality and equal treat- ment	235
(b) Dilatory tactics and allegations of illegality	235
(c) Mutual denial of illegality	236
B. Illegality and jurisdictional limitations	237
1. Competence-competence	237
(a) Commercial arbitration	237
(b) Investment treaty arbitration	243
2. Illegality and separability of the arbitration agreement	244
(a) Commercial arbitration	244
(b) Investment treaty arbitration	248

3. Arbitrability	249
(a) Commercial arbitration	249
(b) Investment treaty arbitration	250
4. Corruption issues and competence, separability and arbitrability	251
Chapter VI. The burden of proof and the standard of proof of illegality	252
A. Introduction	252
B. Burden of proof generally	254
1. Commercial context	254
2. Investment treaty context	255
3. General approaches to burden of proof and its allocation	257
C. Burden of proof and corruption	259
1. General challenges	259
2. Parallel litigation, arbitration or investigations	260
(a) Absence of contractual privity	262
(b) Existence of contractual privity	264
(c) Issues related to the seat and/or applicable arbitral rules	267
(d) Degree of relatedness and relevance	270
3. Approaches to proof in commercial and public law arbitration	273
4. Approaches to proof in investment treaty arbitration	276
5. Similarities and differences in commercial and investment approaches to proof	279
Chapter VII. Attribution of illegal actions and knowledge of the State	281
A. Introduction	281
B. Attribution generally in international arbitration involving States	282
C. The intersection between corruption and attribution	286
Chapter VIII. The rights and duties of the arbitrator	294
A. Introduction	294
B. Conceptual challenges and issues related to rights and duties generally	294
1. Rights of the international arbitrator	294

2. Duties of the international arbitrator	296
(a) Duties of the arbitrator and party autonomy	296
(b) Duties of the arbitrator and public policy	297
(c) Standards of procedural international public policy	299
(d) Policy-related concerns, including enforceability	312
3. The arbitrator's investigative rights and duties in the context of corruption	316
4. Should or must an arbitrator always decide illegality when alleged ?	317
(a) Degree or lack of reviewability of the award	319
(b) The limited extent and quality of review of the award.	320
(c) The unlikelihood of review or annulment of the award.	321
(d) The quality of the award and its subsequent scrutiny	321
(e) The precedential value or use of the award	322
(f) Social engineering within the constraints of the arbitral mandate	322
(g) Toleration of illegality as a discouragement for future conduct.	323
(h) Pressure and moral suasion on the reviewing instance	324
(i) The undesirable option of resignation.	324
(j) The arbitrator and the appointing authority	325
(k) Informing the penal authorities of the illegality	334
5. How should or must the arbitrator treat illegality when admitted ?	337
6. Should or must the arbitrator, sua sponte , decide illegality when not alleged ?	339
Chapter IX. Legal consequences of a finding or admission of corruption	352
A. Introduction	352
B. Jurisdiction and admissibility versus the merits: general conceptual challenges	354
1. Issues common to commercial and investment treaty context	355

(a) Time and cost of adjudication	355
(b) Assessment of the issue at an early, uninformed stage	356
(c) The right of the arbitrator to confirm his authority	357
(d) Waiver of objections by the party	358
(e) Characterization of the objection or defence	359
(f) Tribunal considerations in making the characterization	359
(g) Bifurcation and the further arbitral proceedings	360
2. Differences between commercial and investment treaty context	362
(a) Perspectives on time and cost of adjudication	362
(b) Trends in requesting and granting requests for bifurcation	362
(c) The applicable law or laws	363
(d) Privity of contract versus "consent"	364
(e) Distinguishing jurisdiction and admissibility	365
C. Jurisdiction and admissibility versus the merits: the illegality and corruption context	370
1. Issues common to the commercial and investment treaty context	370
(a) Jurisdiction and admissibility as early-stage problems	370
(b) The form of decision and the further merits proceedings	371
(c) Proof and law	373
2. Differences between the commercial and investment treaty context	373
(a) Reciprocal allegations of corruption	373
(b) Legality of the investment as a gateway issue	374
(c) Enforceability of the award and corruption	379
D. Legal consequences and effects of a positive finding of illegality or corruption	379
1. The investment treaty context and claimant investor illegality	380

(a) Legality as a prerequisite for jurisdiction and consent	380
(b) Jurisdiction and estoppel based on “unclean hands”	390
(c) The Unclean Hands Doctrine and “equal fault” or “mutual fault”	403
(d) Arbitrability and acts of bribery	407
2. The commercial arbitration context and claimant illegality	412
(a) Possible denial of benefits of arbitration agreement, resulting in lack of jurisdiction ?	412
(b) Where the contract was “made” illegally, is jurisdiction affected?	413
(c) Inadmissibility or voidness on the basis of “unclean hands”	413
(d) Inadmissibility or voidness on the basis of breach of public policy	415
Chapter X. Justifications, excuses and defences for illegal conduct	417
A. Introduction	417
B. Conceptual challenges generally	417
1. Issues common to the commercial and investment treaty context	417
2. Differences between the commercial and investment treaty context	419
C. The specific context of illegality and corruption	420
1. Issues common to the commercial and investment context	420
2. Differences between the commercial and investment treaty context	420
D. Specific defences in the context of illegality and corruption	421
1. Unintentional acts of bribery by the claimant or respondent	421
2. “Facilitation payments” by the claimant to the respondent	422
3. Lawfulness of activity of the claimant in the respondent host State as an excuse	423
4. Unlawfulness of activity of the claimant in the respondent host State as a justification	424

5. Self-help or self-defence, duress, economic necessity by the claimant	427
6. Justification or excuse on the basis of alleged widespread corruption	431
7. Economic necessity as the defence by the State to request for a bribe from the claimant	433
Chapter XI. Standards of review of arbitral awards in the corruption context	435
A. Introduction	435
B. Public policy-related enforceability issues in the corruption context	438
1. Which public policy?	438
(a) Public policy at the seat or as defined by the seat, if any	438
(b) Public policy at the place or places of attempted enforcement, if any	440
2. Competing mandates of public policy and finality	441
(a) Westacre	441
(b) Soleimany	445
(c) Hilmarton	449
(d) Reconciling Westacre , Soleimany and Hilmarton	451
3. Public policy as a content- or results-oriented approach	454
C. Conclusion	458
Bibliography	472
About the author	487
Biographical note	487
Principal publications	488