Acknowledgments

The following individuals carefully reviewed Population and Society: An Introduction, for which I am greatly appreciative: Dr. Walter F. Carroll (Bridgewater State University), William Egelman (Iona College), and Thomas W. Rambler (Emeritus, Rhode Island College). Dr. William H. Story (University of Pittsburgh at Johnstown) also reviewed Chapter 1, while Drs. Paul Lokken and Antoine Joseph (Bryant University) reviewed parts of Chapter 5. Of course none of them bears responsibility for any errors of omission or commission that might have crept into my final manuscript.

The staff of Bryant University is cheery and always accommodating. Administrative assistants Joanne Soeci and Sue Wandyes performed many valued support services. Bryant has a first-rate university library, with a uniformly excellent staff. Head reference librarian Laura Kohl was very helpful, as were her associates Jenifer Bond, Erica Camilli-Roberts, and Cheryl Richardson. Extra special thanks to Ms. Kohl's associates Mackenzie Dunn and Allison Papini, both of whom consistently assisted me in locating my most arcane reference materials.

Regarding translations and interpretations of selected details about Chinese society, I would like to thank my bilingual Bryant University colleagues Professors Yun Xiao, Hong Yang, and Chen Zhang, as well as Mr. Kongli-Liu (Associate Director of Bryant's US-China Institute). I am grateful to additional Bryant colleagues Professors David Lux and Michael Bryant for their support in helping me receive a research sabbatical, a critical resource for allowing me to complete this book in a timely manner.
