

CONTENTS

Martin Schulze Wessel: The Prague Spring as a Laboratory	1
I. Cultural Patterns
Martin Schulze Wessel: Temporal Order during the Prague Spring	7
Thomas M. Bohn: 1968 as a “Double Revolution:” Entanglements between East and West	19
II. Groups of Agents
Vítězslav Sommer: Socialism at the Crossroads: Czechoslovak Reform Communism and the Contradictions of Socialist Governance	35
Johannes Gleixner: Between a New System and Capitalist Rules: The Czechoslovak Economic Reform Discussion and the Question of the Autonomy of the Socialist Economy	53
Martin Franc: The Central Brain of Society? The Czechoslovak Academy of Sciences and the Social Changes of the Second Half of the 1960s	67
Adam Hudek: The Slovak Academy of Sciences in the Reform Process: Visions, Expectations and Demands	83
Jan Mervart: Radical Democrats between Reform and Revolution	99
Ivan Landa: Historical Bloc and Revolution: The Radical Democratic Interpretation of the Prague Spring of 1968	117
Ondřej Matějka: A Long Evangelical Spring? The Czech Protestant Milieu and Communist Reformers between 1963 and 1977	143
Peter Bugge: Too Many Words? Prague Spring Writers in the Eyes of Czechoslovak Political Leaders of 1968	163
III. Mediatization
Marína Zavacká: “Dear Comrade Dubček...” Between a Shift towards Civility and a New Personality Cult	179

Anna Bischof : From “Freedom Fighters” to “Responsible Opposition:” The Czechoslovak Service of Radio Free Europe and the Prague Spring	197
Hélène Leclerc : The Czechoslovak Monthly Journal “Im Herzen Europas” and the Prague Spring	213
Darina Volf : The Search for the “Czechoslovak Model:” Abandoning the Soviet Path and Pioneering Socialism for Highly Developed European Nations	227
IV. Retrospective Interpretation and Its Agents
Zdeněk Nebřenský : The Prague Spring of 1968 as “Master Narrative:” Emergence, Continuity, and Transformation	243
Nora Schmidt : Spring, Summer, Autumn and Winter in Political Reform Efforts: On the Cyclical Nature of Individual Commitment in the Work of Ludvík Vaculík	261
Pavel Kolář : Interpreting the Prague Spring: Disillusion, Melancholia, and the Waning of the Left	277
List of Abbreviations and Acronyms	293
Index of Personal Names	295
Contributors	303