

Contents

Preface	1
1 Introduction.....	3
1.1 Cities and networks	3
1.2 Polycentric urban regions.....	3
1.3 Polycentric urban regions on the policy agenda	5
1.4 Intercity relationships in theory	8
1.5 Research aims and questions.....	10
1.6 Outline of the thesis	11
2 Polycentric urban regions and the quest for synergy: Is a network of cities more than the sum of the parts?	23
2.1 Introduction.....	24
2.2 Synergy in networks	25
2.3 Synergy in polycentric urban regions.....	27
2.4 The Randstad: Is it more than the sum of the parts?	31
2.5 Co-operation or horizontal synergy in the Randstad	32
2.6 Complementarity or vertical synergy in the Randstad	35
2.7 Conclusions	40
3 Clones or complements? The division of labour between the main cities of the Randstad, the Flemish Diamond and the RheinRuhr Area.....	47
3.1 Introduction.....	48
3.2 Complementary relationships.....	50
3.3 The analysis of complementarity.....	52
3.4 The division of labour in the Randstad, the Flemish Diamond and the RheinRuhr Area.....	56
3.5 Conclusion.....	63
4 From central place to network model: Theory and evidence of a paradigm-change	69
4.1 Intercity relationships: from hierarchy to network?	70
4.2 A network model of spatial organisation	71
4.3 Research approach	74
4.4 Hogescholen	76
4.5 Hospitals	81
4.6 Conclusion.....	85
5 Realising potential: Building regional organising capacity in polycentric urban regions	91
5.1 Polycentricity and regional development	92

Contents

5.2	The polycentric urban region in spatial planning policy.....	94
5.3	Potentialities of a regional approach in polycentric urban regions	98
5.4	Limited regional organising capacity in polycentric urban regions	100
5.5	Context-bound constraints to the building of regional organising capacity.....	101
5.6	Conclusions	106
6	Summing small cities does not make a metropolis: Polycentric urban regions and the provision of cultural, leisure and sports amenities	113
6.1	Introduction.....	114
6.2	Regional externalities in PURs.....	115
6.3	Research design.....	117
6.4	Analysis: linking the shape of the regional urban system with the presence of urban amenities.....	126
6.5	Conclusion.....	128
7	Synthesis	135
7.1	Introduction.....	135
7.2	Summary of results	136
7.3	Reflections.....	147
7.4	Implications for regional development strategies in PURs...	152
7.5	Directions for further research.....	156
7.6	Final remarks	158
Appendix A	Interviewees	162
	Samenvatting Synergie in polycentrische stedelijke regio's: complementariteit, organiserend vermogen en kritische massa	163
	Curriculum Vitae	181