Contents

Ac	knowledgments	ix
Cł	napter 1. What Is Process-Tracing?	I
	I.I. Introduction: The Three Components of Process-Tracing as a Social Science Method	I
	1.2. What Are We Tracing?	2
	1.3. What Are Traces?	4
	1.4. Case Selection and Generalization	6
	1.5. Four Variants of Process-Tracing	9
	1.6. A Primer on the Foundations of Case-Based Methods	12
Chapter 2. What Are We Tracing?		29
	2.1. Introduction	29
	2.2. The Nature of Causal Mechanisms	30
	2.3. Five Common Questions Relating to Mechanistic Approac	hes 41
Cł	napter 3. Theorizing Concepts and Causal Mechanisms	53
	3.1. Introduction	53
	3.2. Defining Concepts to Be Compatible with
	Mechanistic Explanations	54
	3.3. Theorizing Mechanisms—Minimalist and Systems
	Understandings	64
	3.4. Level of Abstraction of Mechanistic Explanations	73
	3.5. The Importance of Context and the Dangers of Mechanisti	c
	Heterogeneity	77
	3.6. The Temporal Dimension and Levels of Analysis	81
	3.7. The Building Blocks of Mechanism-Based
	Theoretical Explanations	84
	3.8. How to Theorize about Mechanisms in Practice	86

Chapter 4. Case Selection and Nesting of Process-Tracing
Case Studies	89
with Markus Siewert
4.1. Introduction	89
4.2. Selecting Appropriate Cases for Process-Tracing	91
4.3. Problems with the State of the Art Regarding Generalizing
Findings about Mechanisms	103
4.4. Five Sources of Mechanistic Heterogeneity	112
4.5. Snowballing Outward as a Strategy to Test the Boundaries of Generalization When Generalizing from Process-Tracing
Case Studies	129
4.6. Conclusions	144
Appendix 1—An Illustration of Mechanistic Heterogeneity in Practice	145
Appendix 2—Bounding Populations in Practice	150
Chapter 5. Making Inferences Using Mechanistic Evidence	155
5.1. Introduction	155
5.2. Problems with Existing Approaches for Making Inferences	,, in Process-Tracing	158
5.3. What Is Mechanistic Evidence?	171
5.4. Bayesian Reasoning and Operationalizing Propositions about the Empirical Fingerprints of Mechanisms	172
5.5. What Is Our Prior Confidence in the Theoretical Hypothesis?	182
5.6. Operationalizing Empirical Fingerprints of Mechanisms	186
Chapter 6. Linking Propositions with Empirical Material—
Finding and Evaluating Evidence	TOS
6.1. Introduction	195
6.2. Collecting Observations	197
6.3. Evaluating What Found/Not Found Observations Tell Us	19/
about the Existence of a Proposition	199
6.4. Can We Trust the Found/Not Found Observables?	204
6.5. Challenges Associated with Different Types of Sources	213
Chapter 7. Evaluating the Overall Probative Value of Mechanistic Evidence	223
7.1. Introduction	223
7.2. Argument Road Maps	224
7.3. Rules for Aggregating Evidence	229
7.4. An Example of the Aggregation of Evidence in Practice—Tannenwald (1999)	236

	Contents	vii
Chapter 8. Theory-Testing Process-Tracing 8.1. Introduction		245 245
8.2. Minimalist Theory-Testing Process-Tracing 8.3. In-Depth Theory-Testing Process-Tracing		246 252
8.4. Guidelines for Theory-Testing Process-Tracing  Appendix 1—An Example of In-Depth Theory-Testing		257
Process-Tracing		260
Chapter 9. Theory-Building Process-Tracing 9.1. Introduction		269
		269
9.2. Theory-Building Process-Tracing		270
9.3. Theory Revision with Theory-Building Process-Tracing		274
9.4. Guidelines for Theory-Building Process-Tracing		275
Appendix 1—Janis's Theory-Building Process-Tracing		278
Chapter 10. Explaining-Outcome Process-Tracing 10.1. Introduction 10.2. Conducting an Explaining-Outcome Process-Tracing D Appendix 1—An Example of Explaining-Outcome Process-Tr	_	281 281 286 288
Appendix: "Silver Blaze"		289
References		295
Index		313