

Contents

4.4.1 Contractual Relationship for Commercial and Non-Commercial Services 49

4.4.2 Operators' Level of Freedom to Design the Service 50

4.4.3 Market Versus Authority Initiative 50

4.5 A Theoretical Model That Captures the Current Institutional Features in Germany 50

4.5.1 Awarding via Auctioning 50

4.5.2 A Model for the German Institutional Setting 50

4.6 Market Participants' Opportunities 50

4.6.1 The Distinction Between Commercial and Non-Commercial Services 50

4.6.2 The Threshold as a PTA Break-Even Point 50

4.6.3 The Challenge of Different Expectations 50

4.6.4 Effect of Commercial Services for Market Participants 50

Part I Overview

1 Introduction and Focus of Analysis 3

1.1 Introduction 3

1.2 Focus of Analysis: Competition for Short-Distance Services by Bus 4

2 General Literature Overview 7

3 Structure of the Book 11

3.1 Abstract of Part II: Framework 11

3.2 Abstract of Part III: Competition for Non-Commercial Services 12

3.3 Abstract of Part IV: Competition for Commercial Services 13

3.4 Abstract of Part V: Conclusion and Outlook 14

Part II The German Institutional Framework

4 The Distinction Between Commercial and Non-Commercial Bus Services 17

4.1 Introduction 17

4.2 Market Reform in the Mid-1990s and Major Innovations 18

4.3 Current Legal Framework in Germany 20

4.3.1 Financing Structure for Commercial and Non-Commercial Services 20

4.3.2 Awarding of Exclusive Rights for Commercial Services 23

4.3.3 Granting Supplementary Subsidies for Non-Commercial Services 25

4.3.4 Comparing of Competition for Commercial and Non-Commercial Services and Direct Awarding 26

4.4	A European Perspective on Institutional Frameworks and on the German Case	28
4.4.1	Contractual Relationship for Commercial and Non-Commercial Services	29
4.4.2	Operators' Level of Freedom to Design the Service	32
4.4.3	Market Versus Authority Initiative	38
4.5	A Theoretical Model That Captures the Current Institutional Features in Germany	40
4.5.1	Awarding via Auctioning	40
4.5.2	A Model for the German Institutional Setting	43
4.6	Market Participants' Opportunities	45
4.6.1	The Distinction Between Commercial and Non-Commercial Services	45
4.6.2	The Threshold as a PTA's Break-Even Point	47
4.6.3	The Challenge of Different Expectations	47
4.6.4	Effects of Commercial Services for Market Participants	48
4.7	Conclusions	50
5	The Practice with Different Institutional Models Within the Framework	51
5.1	Introduction	51
5.2	The Situation Before Market Reform: Where are we Coming from?	52
5.3	Transition	54
5.3.1	Market Reform in the Mid-1990s	54
5.3.2	Introducing Tendering: Initial Successes and Pitfalls	56
5.3.3	Is There an Obligation to Tender or Not? The Judicial Point of View	60
5.4	The Current Situation and Perspective: How to Introduce Competition?	62
5.4.1	Clear Decision to Tender: The Case of Hesse	63
5.4.2	Decision to Promote Competition for Commercial Services: Saxony-Anhalt	70
5.5	Assessing the Procedural Possibilities	78
5.6	Conclusions	80
6	International Comparisons: Alternatives Beyond Competitive Tendering	81
6.1	Introduction	81
6.2	Overview and Discussion of International Models	83
6.2.1	Division of Competition-Based Alternatives to Competitive Tendering – Really Possible?	83
6.2.2	Direct Awarding – an Efficient Alternative to Competitive Arrangements?	87

6.3 An Attempt at Designing a Market Initiated Regime	89
6.4 Conclusions	92

Part III Competition for Non-Commercial Services

7 General Conditions Surrounding Non-Commercial Services	95
7.1 Introduction: Basic Structure for Tendering Procedures	95
7.2 Barriers to Market Entry	97
7.2.1 General Remarks	97
7.2.2 Relevance of Uncertainty and Risk for Public Service Contracts	98
7.3 Risk Factors in Public Service Contracts	99
7.3.1 Definition of Risk Components	99
7.3.2 Typical Types of Risk Allocation and Contract Forms	102
7.3.3 Risk Sharing	105
7.4 Revenue Risk and Winner's Curse: A Cause for Debate in Germany	106
7.4.1 Common Value Auctions and Winner's Curse	107
7.4.2 Revenue Risk: A Relevant Issue of Winner's Curse in Germany	108
7.5 Conclusions	109
8 Experiences with Competitive Tendering of Bus Services	111
8.1 Introduction	111
8.2 Market Development and Background	113
8.2.1 State of Hesse	114
8.2.2 Mannheim Area	116
8.2.3 Hamburg Area	116
8.2.4 Munich Area	116
8.3 Description of Database	117
8.3.1 Characteristics of Previous Studies	118
8.3.2 Characteristics of Database I	118
8.4 Results and Discussion	123
8.4.1 Impacts of Tendering on Unit Costs and Quality	123
8.4.2 Effects of Tendering on Operators and Employees	129
8.4.3 Entry Barriers Within the Market for Non-Commercial Services	132
8.5 Conclusions	134
9 Factors Affecting Tender Prices	137
9.1 Introduction	137
9.2 Data	138
9.2.1 Database II	138
9.2.2 Dependent Variables	139
9.2.3 Explanatory Variables	143

9.3	Seemingly Unrelated Regressions	145
9.3.1	Methodology	145
9.3.2	Model, Results and Interpretation	146
9.4	Stochastic Frontier Analysis	149
9.4.1	Methodology	149
9.4.2	SFA-Results and Interpretation	150
9.5	Conclusions	154

Part IV Competition for Commercial Services

10	Market Entry Barriers for Commercial Services	157
10.1	Introduction	157
10.2	Surrounding Conditions	158
10.2.1	Basic Structure for Awarding Licenses for Commercial Services	158
10.2.2	Classification of Competition for Commercial Services	160
10.2.3	Barriers to Entry for Newcomers	162
10.3	The Market for Commercial Services and its Challenges	163
10.3.1	Database III	163
10.3.2	Descriptive Analysis of a Market in Motion	164
10.3.3	Empirical Analysis	168
10.3.4	Intermediate Results	172
10.4	Uncertainty as a Structural Problem	173
10.4.1	Uncertainty: An Entry Barrier for Commercial Services?	173
10.4.2	Uncertainty About General Aspects	174
10.4.3	Analysis of Uncertainty Within the Procedural Setting	176
10.4.4	Different Developments in the Federal States	181
10.5	Conclusions	186

Part V Conclusions and Outlook

11	Conclusions	191
12	A Proposal to Improve the Current Awarding System in Germany	197
12.1	Introduction	197
12.2	A Proposal to Adjust Germany's Existing Institutional Framework	198
12.2.1	Step 1: LA Determines Whether a Proposed Service is New	199
12.2.2	Step 2: LA Starts Clarification Whether Existing Service is Commercial for the Next License Term	201

12.2.3 Step 3: For Commercial Services, LA Submits Formal
Market Request to Operators 201

12.2.4 Step 4: PTA Makes Control Decision 202

12.2.5 Step 5: PTA Decides on Direct Award or a Competitive
Procedure 203

12.3 Model Assessment 203

Appendix 205

Glossary 219

References 223

Fig. 4.1 Funding structure for public transport services by bus 21

Fig. 4.2 Major participants in the market for commercial services 24

Fig. 4.3 Categorization of services according to type of award 25

Fig. 4.4 Rights and obligations of the parties in a public service contract 29

Fig. 4.5 Contractual relationship for commercial and non-commercial services 31

Fig. 4.6 Contributions of contracting parties to public transport
services 33

Fig. 4.7 Classification of contractual relationships 33

Fig. 4.8 Classification of contractual relationships in the German case 35

Fig. 4.9 Time flow of the model 44

Fig. 4.10 Commercial and non-commercial services from operator's perspective 45

Fig. 6.1 Main differences between the regimes 90

Fig. 7.1 Schedule of tendering procedures 96

Fig. 7.2 Extended typology of contracts according to risk allocation 102

Fig. 7.3 Risk continuum 105

Fig. 8.1 Main regions of competitive tendering in Germany 114

Fig. 8.2 Development of unit costs within the RMV 129

Fig. 8.3 Development of market shares in Hesse 130

Fig. 8.4 Number of firms in the MVV 1997–2009 131

Fig. 9.1 Development of the total costs indices compared to the consumer price index 141

Fig. 9.2 Distribution of number of lots and value p.a. by area 144

Fig. 9.3 Distribution of prices per risk in € for the regional groups 153

Fig. 10.1 Award schedule for commercial services 159

Fig. 10.2 Classification of competition for commercial services 161

Fig. 10.3 Market development of competition for commercial services 165

Fig. 10.4 Regional distribution of competition for commercial services 165