Table of Contents

List of Illustrations 9

Acknowledgements 19

Introduction 21
1. A brief historiographical overview 23
2. Conceptual framework 28
   - 2.1. The pictorial turn: content analysis and semiotics 28
   - 2.2. The spatial turn: the production of space 32
   - 2.3. Cognitive geography 34
3. Panel painting and the Northern Renaissance: patronage and social context 36
   - 3.1. Panel painting and urban culture 37
4. A quantitative approach: corpus and methodology 43
5. Outline of the book 47

Chapter I. Religious space. The city as devotional theatre 49
1. The city as intellectual and religious concept 52
2. The city as religious space in early Netherlandish panel painting 57
   - 2.1. The city as religious theatre: Simultanbilder 58
   - 2.2. The terrestrial Jerusalem 67
   - 2.3. The celestial Jerusalem 74

Chapter II. Economic space. The pulse of the city 85
1. A 'bourgeois' proximity to urban daily life? 88
2. Quantifying depictions of the city as economic space 94
   - 2.1. Interior views: street views throughout early Netherlandish painting 95
     - a. The Master of Flémalle, Jan Van Eyck and the domestic street view 97
     - b. Petrus Christus 102
     - c. Rogier Van der Weyden 105
     - d. Hans Memling 109
     - e. The anonymous masters of the end of the fifteenth century 114
     - f. A general trend towards idealisation 118
   - 2.2. Exterior views: the city and its hinterland 122

2.3. The sixteenth century: harbour views, genre painting and the primacy of Antwerp 127
3. Conclusion 142

Chapter III. Monumental space. The city as a stage 145
1. The city as monumental space 147
2. The city as a socio-political arena 148
2.1. The major features of the urban monumental space 149
2.1.1. The belfry 149
2.1.2. The town hall 157
2.1.3. The exoskeleton of the city: walls and gates 172
2.1.4. Towers as social markers in the urban arena: the Bruges towerscapes (1475-1510) 178
3. The ducal perspective on the urban theatre 196
3.1. The court and the city: Brussels 208
4. Idealisation and theatricalisation: towards a conclusion 213

Chapter IV. Looking Away from the City. Urban Depictions of a Rural Ideal 219
1. Landscape in early Netherlandish art 222
2. The exegesis of landscape motifs 225
3. Landscape motifs in early Netherlandish painting revisited 227
3.1. Town versus countryside: dichotomy or symbiosis? 227
3.2. The countryside a as a place of recreation and mental retreat 230
3.3. The social ideal of the seigniorial countryside 236
3.4. The seigniorial countryside in early Flemish painting 240
4. Conclusion 252

Chapter V. Towards an Identifiable City. Town Portraits of the Sixteenth Century 255
1. The hesitant development of identifiable city views 257
2. Between continuity and change: towards an 'urban cartography'? 271
3. The first Netherlandish profile views and the primacy of Antwerp 276
4. A rising viewpoint: towards the perspective plan 282
5. Conclusion 298

General conclusion 301

Bibliography 307
Archival Sources 307
Edited Sources 307
Secondary Literature 307

Annex 1. List of panel paintings with Bruges towerscapes (1475-1510) 339

Colour plates 341