

CONTENTS

Foreword by Branca Martins da Cruz ix

Foreword by José Rubens Morato Leite xi

Acknowledgements xiii

List of abbreviations xv

Introduction 1

PART ONE Identifying the causes, consequences and history of planned obsolescence 7

01 Consumer society: A product of the growthist economy 9

Human beings and our relationship with the environment 10

From a society of producers to a consumer society 19

An economy led by consumerism: seeking growth 32

02 Planned obsolescence as an instrument of the growthist economy and its socio-environmental consequences 43

Planned obsolescence: concept, classification and history 44

Socio-environmental crisis: the collapse of the consumer society of affluence and the biophysical limits to growth 59

Notes 80

PART TWO How to overcome planned obsolescence: from theory to practice 81

03 Sustainability in Economics and Law: The greening of sciences in the search for a new paradigm 83

The spread of concern about environmental issues and the beginning of building a new development paradigm in the international context: from Eco-development to the Good Life theory 84

Sustainability in Economics 101

Sustainability in Law 114

Notes 134

04 The sustainability paradigm as the foundation to tackle planned obsolescence: New perspectives 135

Green and Circular Economies: one step forward, but same paradigm 137

Necessary interconnections between alternative proposals: revolutionary reforms 147

From Rio92 to Rio+20: the issue of production and consumption patterns 155

Overview of the legal and political debate on planned obsolescence 169

Notes 192

Final considerations 195

Glossary 199

References and further reading 205

Index 213