

CONTENTS

Preface	ix
Abbreviations	x
Introduction	1
Lexicon in General	1
The Chinese Lexicon in Brief	15
1 The Phonological Make-up of the Chinese Lexicon	20
The Syllabic Structure	20
The Consonants	21
The Vowels	22
Initials and Finals	24
Pinyin Orthography	25
Tones and Tone Sandhi	26
Word Stress	28
Erisation and Sound Assimilation	30
Dialectal Interference	31
Syllables versus Words	31
2 The Graphetic Composition of the Chinese Lexicon	35
The Basic Monostrokes	35
The Stylised Patterns	37
Traditional Ways of Character Formation	39
New Formative Devices in Simplified Characters	42
The Radicals	43
The Phonetics	49
Picto-phonetic Arrangement	52
Picto-phonetic Variants	54
Characters Old and New	55
Stroke Sequence in Handwritten Characters	55
The Question of Homophony	56
3 Morphological Features of the Chinese Lexicon	57
Affixes for Human Nouns	59
Affixes for Non-human Nouns	68
Verbal Affixes	74

Adjectival Affixes	76
Adverbial Affixes	77
Numerical Prefixes	79
Pronominal Suffix 卅] men for Plural	80
Prepositional Suffixes	80
Conjunctive Suffixes	81
Negative Prefixes	81
Infixes	84
Parafixes	85
Supramorphological Processes	86
4 Syntactic Features of the Chinese Lexicon	90
Juxtapositional Type	93
Modification Type	122
Governmental Type	135
Predicational Type	157
Complemental Type	168
5 Phonaesthetic Features of the Chinese Lexicon	177
Sound Imageries	180
Tone Imageries	204
Interjections	212
The Phonaesthetic Network	213
6 Rhetorical Features of the Chinese Lexicon	219
Metaphorical Comparison	219
Masquerading Expression	244
Aesthetic Forms of Speech	249
The Rhetorical Scheme of the Lexicon	257
7 Sense Relations of the Chinese Lexicon	265
Hyponymy	265
Polysemy	272
Synonymy	276
Antonymy	284
Meaning Structure in the Mononyms	292
8 Cultural and Socio-Political Features of the Chinese Lexicon	296
China's Historical Past	296
Chinese Views of the World	300
Chinese Ways of Life	304
Dominant Fields of Cultural and Scientific Interest	312
Neologisms	322

9 Loanwords in the Chinese Lexicon	327
A Brief History of Borrowing	327
Diverse Strategies of Borrowing	333
Concluding Remarks	346
Appendix: Intra- and Inter-lexical Strategies of the Chinese and English Lexicons	348
Phonetic	348
Phonaesthetic	350
Morphological	353
Syntactic	355
Semantic	357
Graphetic	360
Collocational	363
Stylistic	364
Cultural	366
Bibliography	369
Index	381

To conclude, I must not forget to mention how deeply indebted I am to Mr David Arrandale of the Beckett Library, the University of Leeds, who read my entire manuscript and made valuable suggestions. I am equally grateful to Mr Kaiying Yang of Praetorius, who helped me in every way he could to solve my computer and software problems. Last but not least, my gratitude goes to my wife Quzhen Li, who, using much of her spare time and annual leave, helped to key the whole book into the computer and painstakingly proofread every single entry whilst facing with me the enormous pressure of meeting the publisher's deadlines. Without her dedication and wholehearted support, it would have been impossible to complete this book at all.

The errors which remain are, of course, the author's sole responsibility.

YIP Po-Ching

April 1999