

Chapter 8, the most difficult to write, has benefited from comments provided by Scott Cowdell and David McKnight.

I would like to extend special thanks to Andrew Glikson, who provided many helpful comments, and Cordelia Fine, who generously devoted time to reading most of the manuscript and providing feedback.

I'm grateful to Gus Speth for facilitating a visit to Yale University where a large portion of the book was written. Charles Sturt University has shown an admirable commitment to promoting public debate by providing me with the freedom to

Acknowledgments	viii
Preface	x
1 No escaping the science	1
2 Growth fetishism	32
3 The consumer self	66
4 Many forms of denial	95
5 Disconnection from Nature	134
6 Is there a way out?	159
7 The four-degree world	190
8 Reconstructing a future	209
Appendix: Greenhouse gases	227
Notes	230
Index	274