

Contents

|                                                     |                                                    |      |
|-----------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------|------|
| Foreword                                            | Edward M. Rowell and Kenneth N. Rogers, Jr. | xi   |
| Acknowledgments                                     |                                                    | xiii |
| Introduction                                        |                                                    | xvii |
| 1. The United States and the Pakistan Movement      |                                                    | 1    |
| 2. Truman: Friends, Not Allies                      |                                                    | 17   |
| 3. Eisenhower I: America's Most Allied Ally in Asia |                                                    | 51   |
| 4. Eisenhower II: Ike Likes Ayub                    |                                                    | 86   |
| 5. Kennedy: Alliance Troubles                       |                                                    | 115  |
| 6. Johnson: The Alliance Unravels                   |                                                    | 147  |
| 7. Nixon: The Tilt                                  |                                                    | 178  |
| 8. Ford: Enter the Nuclear Issue                    |                                                    | 215  |
| 9. Carter: The Low Point                            |                                                    | 227  |
| 10. Reagan: Partners Again                          |                                                    | 256  |
| 11. Bush: The Partnership Collapses                 |                                                    | 295  |
| 12. Clinton: Living with a Nuclear Pakistan         |                                                    | 321  |
| 13. An Unstable Partnership                         |                                                    | 359  |
| Notes                                               |                                                    | 369  |
| Bibliography                                        |                                                    | 431  |
| Interviews and Oral Histories                       |                                                    | 439  |
| Index                                               |                                                    | 445  |