

Contents

Preface	vii
1 World in Transition	1
2 Sovereignty in Theory and Practice	11
The need for historical perspective
The theory of sovereignty
Functions of the modern state
Old debates, new questions
3 The Interpretative Crisis	44
Sovereignty and (post?) modernity
4 World Economy	69
Economic internationalization
The world system
The state and the process of internationalization
Changing nature of hegemony
Role of international organization
Diffusion of power and authority
5 Technological Change	104
Coercive technology and the power of the state
A global architecture of power
The architecture of corporate organization
The architecture of communication
The architecture of production
Lessons from the NICs?
The state and technology policy
6 The Security Dilemma	139
Boundaries
International organization
Interconnectedness of the international system

	The East–West axis of conflict
	Conclusion
7	Ecological Crisis	171
	The emergence of the ecological challenge
	Ecological impact and the sovereign domain
	The ecological impact of sovereignty
	The instrumental character of the state
	The construction of time in the sovereign domain
	The partitioning of environmental acts
	State projects and the environment
	Ecology and the challenge to sovereignty discourse
8	The New Social Movements	199
	Sovereignty and institutional politics
	Characterization of new social movements
	Functions of new social movements
	Reinterpreting time and space
	Implications for sovereignty
9	Current Trends – Future Possibilities	236
	Restatement of the sovereignty model
	Analytical and normative tensions
	Unfolding of historical process
	Extending our conceptual horizons
	Reshaping the future
	Select Bibliography	258
	Historical and theoretical perspectives
	Economic organization
	Technological change
	Security and the use of force
	The environment and its politics
	New social movements
	Index	297