

Contents

Acknowledgements	viii
Introduction Concerning Things that are Given, Things that are Sold and Things that must not be Given or Sold, but Kept	1
1 The Legacy of Mauss	10
A masterwork in chiaroscuro	10
The simple reason behind a reputation: a powerful global vision of gift-exchange as a concatenation of three obligations	10
Gift-giving, a double-edged relationship	11
The enigma of the gift and Mauss' solution	15
Mauss mystified by indigenous theories: Lévi-Strauss' critique	17
Re-examining Lévi-Strauss' critique of Marcel Mauss	19
Lévi-Strauss' solution to the enigma: "floating signifiers"	22
Language's big bang and the symbolic origin of society	23
Lévi-Strauss' postulate: the primacy of the symbolic over the imaginary	25
Forgetting the fourth obligation (men's gifts to the gods and to their representatives)	29
A forgotten Mauss	31
Concerning things that can be given and things that must be kept (Annette Weiner and the paradox of the gift)	32
Concerning the twin foundations of society	36
A critique of Mauss which completes his theory and takes other approaches as well	37
A brief analysis of an example of non-agonistic gift and counter-gift	41

No sooner given than returned (is there such a thing as an absurd gift?)	43
Is the hau really the key to the mystery? (or how Mauss read the lesson of the sage Tamati Ranaipiri, from the Ngati-Raukawa tribe, as collected by the ethnologist Elsdon Best in 1909)	49
Potlatch: the gift-exchange that fascinated Mauss	56
The kula (a Melanesian example of potlatch according to Mauss)	78
Moka	95
Things do not move about without reason or of their own accord	101
2 Substitute Objects for Humans and for the Gods	108
Sacred objects, precious objects and currency objects among the Baruya of New Guinea	109
Concerning the things one keeps among the Baruya	111
Sacred objects as gifts from the Sun, the Moon or the spirits to the Baruya's mythic ancestors	115
Are sacred objects symbols?	121
What is concealed inside a sacred object	125
The men's theft of the flutes	133
On the sublime	135
Concerning things the Baruya produce to give or exchange	138
Baruya shell necklaces and "valuable" objects	141
Gifts between friends	144
Recapitulation of the things that are given, those that are kept and those that are exchanged among the Baruya	145
Hypothesis on the emergence and development of potlatch societies	147
What is the place of potlatch societies in history?	153
What is a valuable?	161
On the metamorphosis of an object of trade into a gift object or a sacred object	167
3 The Sacred	171
What is the sacred?	171
Concerning sacred objects as the presence-absence of man and society	175
Concerning repressed things which enable humans to live in society	177
Concerning the unequal gifts that, from the outset, gods, spirits, and humans have given each other	179
Concerning the critical function of the social sciences	198

Contents

vii

4 The Dis-encharnted Gift	200
Concerning the necessary anchor points for fixing the identities of societies and individuals in time	201
Concerning that which stands beyond the market in a market society	205
The return of the gift and the displacement of the enigma	207
Bibliography	211
Notes	222
Index	249