

Contents

Preface to the Second Edition	x
Preface	xii
Acknowledgements	xxi
Abbreviations	xxiii
Introduction: Rawls's original position	1
The basics of justice as fairness	3
The agenda: claims modelled by the original position	9
The conception of the person	10
Asocial individualism	13
Universalism	18
Subjectivism or objectivism	21
Anti-perfectionism and neutrality	25
PART I
COMMUNITARIAN
CRITIQUES	35
INTRODUCTION TO PART I	37

1 Sandel: the limits of liberalism	40
Liberalism and deontology	42
Rawl's theory of the person	45
The original position	47
The flaws in Rawls's theory of the person	50
Liberalism and moral subjectivism	55
The difference principle	59
Agreement in the original position	64
The limits of liberalism	66
2 MacIntyre: morality after virtue	70
The predicament of contemporary morality	71
The emotivist self	74
The Enlightenment project	77
Aristotle and the virtues	80
The concept of a practice	82
The narrative unity of a human life	86
The concept of a tradition	89
MacIntyre and liberalism	92
3 Taylor: the sources of the liberal self	102
The status of moral intuitions	103
The self in moral space	105
Selves and self-interpretations	108
The self and the community	111
Orientation and narration	113
Hypergoods and practical reasoning	115
The priority of right	119
Taylor and the communitarian critique of Rawls	121
4 Walzer: justice and abstraction	127
Rawls's methodological abstraction	129
Against methodological abstraction: the conceptual argument	132
Against methodological abstraction: the democratic argument	134

The relativity of social meanings	140
Complex equality	147
The desirability of complex equality	151
Walzer contra Rawls	154
Concluding summary	157
Family resemblances: the criticisms of liberalism	157
Family resemblances: the communitarianism of the critics	160
PART II RAWLS'S RESPONSE	165
INTRODUCTION TO PART II	167
5 Rawls's political liberalism	170
How political?	171
Society as a fair system of cooperation between free and equal citizens	173
Why political?	175
Public justifiability and political values	176
Political constructivism	180
The liberal political ideal	181
The role of stability	184
Concluding summary	189
6 Political liberalism and the communitarian critique	191
The conception of the person	192
Asocial individualism	198
The constitutive role of social matrices	199
The importance of communal goods	201
Universalism	205
Rawls and Walzer: abstraction and cultural particularity	206
Rawls and international justice	210
Subjectivism/objectivism	213

The relativity of social meanings	140
Complex equality	147
The desirability of complex equality	151
Walzer contra Rawls	154
Concluding summary	157
Family resemblances: the criticisms of liberalism	157
Family resemblances: the communitarianism of the critics	160
PART II RAWLS'S RESPONSE	165
INTRODUCTION TO PART II	167
5 Rawls's political liberalism	170
How political?	171
Society as a fair system of cooperation between free and equal citizens	173
Why political?	175
Public justifiability and political values	176
Political constructivism	180
The liberal political ideal	181
The role of stability	184
Concluding summary	189
6 Political liberalism and the communitarian critique	191
The conception of the person	192
Asocial individualism	198
The constitutive role of social matrices	199
The importance of communal goods	201
Universalism	205
Rawls and Walzer: abstraction and cultural particularity	206
Rawls and international justice	210
Subjectivism/objectivism	213

Anti-perfectionism and neutrality	218
Rawls the communitarian?	221
7 Political liberalism: political or comprehensive?	223
The scope of the priority of the political	225
Justifying the priority of the political	227
The value of fair social cooperation	228
Reasonable pluralism and the burdens of judgement	231
The structural integrity of political liberalism	240
The two stages of justification	240
The two faces of public justifiability	242
 PART III
LIBERALISM, POLITICS
AND NEUTRALITY	247
 INTRODUCTION TO PART III	249
 8 Rorty: liberalism without foundations	259
Foundational theories of the person	262
Alien vocabularies	264
Concepts, truth and reality	266
Communitarianism and correspondence	269
Metaphysics and politics	271
 9 Dworkin: philosophical foundations for state neutrality	276
Dworkin's philosophical foundations	277
The strategy of discontinuity	277
The strategy of continuity	282
From ethics to politics: the emergence of Dworkinian state neutrality	290

Equality and partiality	292
Tolerance and partiality	293
Community	294
Conclusion: Dworkin and communitarianism	296
10 Raz: the politics of perfection	309
Raz's perfectionist autonomy	311
Ideals qua valid not qua beliefs: perfectionism against scepticism	313
Not coercive imposition	319
Autonomy and value pluralism	323
Autonomy, social forms and state perfectionism	326
Well-being depends on social forms	327
Social forms require perfectionist political action	331
Autonomy only conditionally valuable	340
Raz and communitarianism	341
Conclusion	348
Bibliography	354
Index	358