

CONTENTS

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE	xiv
INTRODUCTION	i
I. THE ORIGINS OF DIALECTIC	7
1. The contingency of human existence	11
2. The soteriology of Plotinus	12
3. Plotinus and Christian Platonism. The search for the reason of creation	17 23
4. Eriugena and Christian theogony	31
5. Eckhart and the dialectic of deification	33
6. Nicholas of Cusa. The contradictions of Absolute Being	36
7. Böhme and the duality of Being	37
8. Angelus Silesius and Fénelon: salvation through annihila- tion	39
9. The Enlightenment. The realization of man in the schema of naturalism	41
10. Rousseau and Hume. Destruction of the belief in natural harmony	44
11. Kant. The duality of man's being, and its remedy	50
12. Fichte and the self-conquest of the spirit	56
13. Hegel. The progress of consciousness towards the Absolute	70
14. Hegel. Freedom as the goal of history	81
II. THE HEGELIAN LEFT	81
1. The disintegration of Hegelianism	84
2. David Strauss and the critique of religion	85
3. Cieszkowski and the philosophy of action	88
4. Bruno Bauer and the negativity of self-consciousness	92
5. Arnold Ruge. The radicalization of the Hegelian Left

III. MARX'S THOUGHT IN ITS EARLIEST PHASE	96
1. Early years and studies	96
2. Hellenistic philosophy as understood by the Hegelians	99
3. Marx's studies of Epicurus. Freedom and self-consciousness	100
IV. HESS AND FEUERBACH	108
1. Hess. The philosophy of action	108
2. Hess. Revolution and freedom	111
3. Feuerbach and religious alienation	114
4. Feuerbach's second phase. Sources of the religious fallacy	116
V. MARX'S EARLY POLITICAL AND PHILOSOPHICAL WRITINGS	120
1. The state and intellectual freedom	120
2. Criticism of Hegel. The state, society, individuality	122
3. The idea of social emancipation	125
4. The discovery of the proletariat	127
VI. THE PARIS MANUSCRIPTS. THE THEORY OF ALIENATED LABOUR. THE YOUNG ENGELS	132
1. Critique of Hegel. Labour as the foundation of humanity	133
2. The social and practical character of knowledge	134
3. The alienation of labour. Dehumanized man	138
4. Critique of Feuerbach	141
5. Engels's early writings	144
VII. THE HOLY FAMILY	147
1. Communism as a historical trend. The class-consciousness of the proletariat	148
2. Progress and the masses	149
3. The world of needs	150
4. The tradition of materialism	151
VIII. THE GERMAN IDEOLOGY	153
1. The concept of ideology	153
2. Social being and consciousness	155
3. The division of labour, and its abolition	159
4. Individuality and freedom	161
5. Stirner and the philosophy of egocentrism	163

6. Critique of Stirner. The individual and the community	168
7. Alienation and the division of labour	172
8. The liberation of man and the class struggle	173
9. The epistemological meaning of the theory of false consciousness	174

IX. RECAPITULATION 177

X. SOCIALIST IDEAS IN THE FIRST HALF OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY AS COMPARED WITH MARXIAN SOCIALISM 182

1. The rise of the socialist idea	182
2. Babouvism	184
3. Saint-Simonism	187
4. Owen	193
5. Fourier	198
6. Proudhon	203
7. Weitling	211
8. Cabet	213
9. Blanqui	214
10. Blanc	216
11. Marxism and 'utopian socialism'	218
12. Marx's critique of Proudhon	224
13. The Communist Manifesto	227

XI. THE WRITINGS AND STRUGGLES OF MARX AND ENGELS AFTER 1847 234

1. Developments in the 1850s	234
2. Lassalle	238
3. The First International. Bakunin	244

XII. CAPITALISM AS A DEHUMANIZED WORLD. THE NATURE OF EXPLOITATION 262

1. The controversy as to the relation of Capital to Marx's early writings	262
2. The classical economic tradition and the theory of value	268
3. The double form of value and the double character of labour	271
4. Commodity fetishism. Labour-power as a commodity	276
5. The alienation of labour and of its product	281

6. The alienation of the process of socialization	285
7. The pauperization of the working class	288
8. The nature and historical mission of capitalism	291
9. The distribution of surplus value	294
 XIII. THE CONTRADICTIONS OF CAPITAL AND THEIR ABOLITION. THE UNITY OF ANALYSIS AND ACTION	 297
1. The falling rate of profit and the inevitable collapse of capitalism	297
2. The economical and political struggle of the proletariat	302
3. The nature of socialism, and its two phases	305
4. The dialectic of Capital : the whole and the part, the concrete and the abstract	312
5. The dialectic of Capital : consciousness and the historical process	319
6. Comments on Marx's theory of value and exploitation	325
 XIV. THE MOTIVE FORCES OF THE HISTORICAL PROCESS	 335
1. Productive forces, relations of production, superstructure	335
2. Social being and consciousness	338
3. Historical progress and its contradictions	346
4. The monistic interpretation of social relationships	351
5. The concept of class	352
6. The origin of class	358
7. The functions of the state and its abolition	358
8. Commentary on historical materialism	363
 XV. THE DIALECTIC OF NATURE	 376
1. The scientific approach	376
2. Materialism and idealism. The twilight of philosophy	378
3. Space and time	381
4. The variability of nature	382
5. Multiple forms of change	383
6. Causality and chance	384
7. The dialectic in nature and in thought	387
8. Quantity and quality	389
9. Contradictions in the world	390
10. The negation of the negation	392
11. Critique of agnosticism	393

Contents

xiii

12. Experience and theory	393
13. The relativity of knowledge	395
14. Practice as the criterion of truth	396
15. The sources of religion	397

XVI. RECAPITULATION AND PHILOSOPHICAL COMMENTARY

399

1. Marx's philosophy and that of Engels	399
2. Three motifs in Marxism	408
3. Marxism as the source of Leninism	416

SELECTIVE BIBLIOGRAPHY

421

INDEX

429