

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Timeline	xi
Global Rubber and Tire Companies	xvii
Introduction: Why Rubber?	1
Global Connections	8
1 Race, Migration, and Labor	10
"Wild Rubber" and Early Industry	11
"Wild Rubber" and Empire	14
Plantations' Progress: "Rationality and Efficiency"	17
Plantation Hierarchies	21
Race and Industry in the United States and Europe	29
2 Women and Gender on Plantations and in Factories	40
Gendering the Jungle and the Plantation	42
Asian Women on Plantations	44
European Women and Racism	48
The Colonizing Woman	50
Gendered Production in the United States and Europe	52
Rubber and Sex in Indochine	56
3 Demand and Everyday Consumption	61
Everyday Consumption on Southeast Asian Plantations	62
Class and Consumption in North America and Europe	64
Race and Consumption in Europe and North America	68
Gender and Consumption in Europe and North America	71
Gendering Reproduction	77

4	World Wars, Nationalism, and Imperialism	83
	World War I	84
	"See America First" on "Good Roads"	86
	Flying for the Nation	88
	Restricting Rubber in the Wake of War	90
	American Assertions: Herbert Hoover and US Trade	91
	Firestone and Friends	94
	Firestone in Liberia	96
	Germany: Colonies and Chemicals	99
	World War II and the US Scramble for Rubber	102
	Nazi Racism and Buna at Auschwitz	105
	Imperialism and Nationalism in the Wake of World War II	107
5	Resistance and Independence	111
	Plantations and Resistance	112
	Global Economic Crisis and Plantation Labor	118
	Success of the Smallholders	120
	Plantations under the Japanese	124
	Independence and Decolonization	126
	United Rubber Workers	131
	Conclusion: Forgetting and Remembering Rubber	137
	Suggested Readings	142
	Index	157