

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
------------------	----

I. Introduction

1 Sociology and the aetiology of depression	3
2 Depression	21
3 Research design	46

II. The provoking agents

4 Measurement of life-events	63
5 Meaning	82
6 Life-events and depression	100
7 The importance of events	117
8 Difficulties	130
9 Events and difficulties	138
10 Social class, provoking agents, and depression	150

III. Vulnerability factors

11 Vulnerability	173
12 Borderline and chronic conditions	192

IV. Symptom-formation factors

13 Severity of depression	205
14 Psychotic and neurotic depression and the existence of endogenous depression	213

V. Interpretation and conclusions
15 Depression and loss	233
16 A model of depression	264
17 Summary and conclusions	270
VI. Appendices
1 Examples of caseness and borderline caseness	297
2 Clinical ratings	303
3 Examples of events by type and severity	309
4 The brought forward time index: T_{BF}	315
5 Interview schedule for events and difficulties	323
6 Examples of difficulties by type and severity	340
Notes	343
References	375
Index	391