

---

CONTENTS

---

|                                                                                         |      |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------|
| Preface . . . . .                                                                       | iii  |
| Figures . . . . .                                                                       | xi   |
| Tables . . . . .                                                                        | xiii |
| Acknowledgments . . . . .                                                               | xvii |
| Chapter One                                                                             |      |
| INTRODUCTION . . . . .                                                                  | 1    |
| The Context . . . . .                                                                   | 1    |
| The Model . . . . .                                                                     | 8    |
| Assumptions and Considerations . . . . .                                                | 11   |
| Organization . . . . .                                                                  | 15   |
| Chapter Two                                                                             |      |
| THE PROCESS MODEL FOR ANTICIPATINGETHNIC CONFLICT . . . . .                         | 17   |
| Approaches to Ethnicity . . . . .                                                       | 17   |
| The Primordialist Approach . . . . .                                                    | 18   |
| The Epiphenomenalist Approach . . . . .                                                 | 21   |
| The Ascriptive Approach . . . . .                                                       | 24   |
| Rationale for Using the Ascriptive Approach . . . . .                                   | 29   |
| Introducing the Model . . . . .                                                         | 30   |
| Stage I: Investigating the Potential for Strife . . . . .                               | 32   |
| Closure . . . . .                                                                       | 32   |
| Identifying Closure . . . . .                                                           | 34   |
| Stage II: Understanding the Transformation fromPotential to Likely Strife . . . . . | 39   |
| Potential Versus Likely Strife . . . . .                                                | 39   |

|                                                                                                                                   |     |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Mobilization for Political Action . . . . .                                                                                       | 42  |
| Stage III: From Likely to Actual Strife: UnderstandingState Capabilities and the Process of StrategicBargaining . . . . . | 52  |
| State Capacity . . . . .                                                                                                          | 52  |
| Strategic Bargaining . . . . .                                                                                                    | 58  |
| Chapter Three                                                                                                                     |     |
| THE YUGOSLAV RETROSPECTIVE CASE . . . . .                                                                                         | 75  |
| Introduction . . . . .                                                                                                            | 75  |
| Assessing the Potential for Strife . . . . .                                                                                      | 77  |
| Closure in the Political and Security Realms . . . . .                                                                            | 77  |
| Closure in the Economic Realm . . . . .                                                                                           | 89  |
| Closure in the Social Realm . . . . .                                                                                             | 93  |
| Overall Assessment of Closure . . . . .                                                                                           | 98  |
| Transforming Potential Strife into Likely Strife . . . . .                                                                        | 101 |
| Incipient Changes . . . . .                                                                                                       | 101 |
| Tipping Events . . . . .                                                                                                          | 104 |
| Leadership . . . . .                                                                                                              | 106 |
| Resources and Organization . . . . .                                                                                              | 107 |
| Foreign Element . . . . .                                                                                                         | 109 |
| Overall Assessment of Mobilization . . . . .                                                                                      | 109 |
| Assessing the State . . . . .                                                                                                     | 110 |
| Accommodative Capability . . . . .                                                                                                | 110 |
| Fiscal and Economic Capability . . . . .                                                                                          | 113 |
| Coercive Capability . . . . .                                                                                                     | 115 |
| Strategic Bargaining . . . . .                                                                                                    | 119 |
| Measuring the Group's Capacities . . . . .                                                                                        | 119 |
| Measuring the State's Capacities . . . . .                                                                                        | 120 |
| Outcome of Bargaining and Preferences for Violence . .                                                                            | 122 |
| The Course of Events . . . . .                                                                                                    | 123 |
| Final Observations . . . . .                                                                                                      | 125 |
| Annex: Demographic Characteristics of Yugoslavia in theLate 1980s . . . . .                                                   | 128 |
| Chapter Four                                                                                                                      |     |
| THE SOUTH AFRICAN RETROSPECTIVE CASE . . . . .                                                                                    | 133 |
| Introduction . . . . .                                                                                                            | 133 |
| Assessing the Potential for Strife . . . . .                                                                                      | 136 |
| Closure in the Political and Security Realms . . . . .                                                                            | 136 |
| Assessing Closure in the Economic Realm . . . . .                                                                                 | 142 |

|                                                                                   |     |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Closure in the Social Realm . . . . .                                             | 146 |
| Overall Assessment of Closure . . . . .                                           | 151 |
| Transforming Potential Strife into Likely Strife . . . . .                        | 153 |
| Incipient Changes . . . . .                                                       | 155 |
| Tipping Events . . . . .                                                          | 159 |
| Leadership . . . . .                                                              | 160 |
| Resources and Organization . . . . .                                              | 161 |
| Foreign Element . . . . .                                                         | 163 |
| Overall Assessment of Mobilization . . . . .                                      | 164 |
| Assessing the State . . . . .                                                     | 164 |
| Accommodative Capability . . . . .                                                | 164 |
| Fiscal and Economic Capability . . . . .                                          | 168 |
| Coercive Capability . . . . .                                                     | 172 |
| Strategic Bargaining . . . . .                                                    | 176 |
| Measuring the Group's Capacities . . . . .                                        | 176 |
| Measuring the State's Capacities . . . . .                                        | 178 |
| Outcome of Bargaining and Preferences for Violence . . . . .                      | 179 |
| The Course of Events . . . . .                                                    | 181 |
| Final Observations . . . . .                                                      | 184 |
| Annex: Demographic Characteristics of South Africa in theLate 1980s . . . . . | 188 |
| Chapter Five                                                                      |     |
| THE ETHIOPIAN PROSPECTIVE CASE . . . . .                                          | 193 |
| Introduction . . . . .                                                            | 193 |
| Assessing the Potential for Strife . . . . .                                      | 195 |
| Closure in the Political and Security Realms . . . . .                            | 195 |
| Closure in the Economic Realm . . . . .                                           | 201 |
| Closure in the Social Realm . . . . .                                             | 202 |
| Overall Assessment of Closure . . . . .                                           | 206 |
| Transforming Potential Strife into Likely Strife . . . . .                        | 208 |
| Primary Scenario: Amhara Mobilization . . . . .                                   | 208 |
| Incipient Changes . . . . .                                                       | 209 |
| Tipping Events . . . . .                                                          | 209 |
| Leadership . . . . .                                                              | 210 |
| Resources and Organization . . . . .                                              | 210 |
| Foreign Element . . . . .                                                         | 211 |
| Overall Assessment of Mobilization . . . . .                                      | 212 |
| Secondary Scenario: Oromo Mobilization . . . . .                                  | 212 |
| Tertiary Scenario: Somali Mobilization . . . . .                                  | 213 |

|                                                                          |     |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Assessing the State . . . . .                                            | 215 |
| Accommodative Capability . . . . .                                       | 215 |
| Fiscal and Economic Capability . . . . .                                 | 218 |
| Coercive Capability . . . . .                                            | 220 |
| Strategic Bargaining . . . . .                                           | 222 |
| Measuring the Group's Capacities . . . . .                               | 222 |
| Measuring the State's Capacities . . . . .                               | 223 |
| Outcome of Bargaining and Preferences for Violence . .                   | 225 |
| Revisiting the Evaluation . . . . .                                      | 227 |
| Final Observations . . . . .                                             | 231 |
| Afterword . . . . .                                                      | 233 |
| Annex: Demographic Characteristics of Ethiopia in1997–1998 . . . . . | 234 |
| Chapter Six                                                              |     |
| THE SAUDI ARABIAN PROSPECTIVE CASE . . . . .                             | 239 |
| Introduction . . . . .                                                   | 239 |
| Assessing the Potential for Strife . . . . .                             | 241 |
| Closure in the Political and Security Realms . . . . .                   | 241 |
| Closure in the Economic Realm . . . . .                                  | 247 |
| Closure in the Social Realm . . . . .                                    | 249 |
| Overall Assessment of Closure . . . . .                                  | 252 |
| Transforming Potential Strife into Likely Strife . . . . .               | 253 |
| Primary Scenario: Shi'ite Mobilization . . . . .                         | 254 |
| Incipient Changes . . . . .                                              | 254 |
| Tipping Events . . . . .                                                 | 256 |
| Leadership . . . . .                                                     | 256 |
| Resources and Organization . . . . .                                     | 257 |
| Foreign Element . . . . .                                                | 257 |
| Overall Assessment of Mobilization . . . . .                             | 258 |
| Other Scenarios . . . . .                                                | 259 |
| Assessing the State . . . . .                                            | 260 |
| Accommodative Capability . . . . .                                       | 260 |
| Fiscal and Economic Capability . . . . .                                 | 262 |
| Coercive Capability . . . . .                                            | 264 |
| Strategic Bargaining . . . . .                                           | 266 |
| Measuring the Group's Capacities . . . . .                               | 266 |
| Measuring the State's Capacities . . . . .                               | 267 |
| Outcome of Bargaining and Preferences for Violence . .                   | 268 |
| Revisiting the Evaluation . . . . .                                      | 270 |

|                                                                              |     |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Final Observations . . . . .                                                 | 273 |
| Afterword . . . . .                                                          | 275 |
| Annex: Demographic Characteristics of Saudi Arabia in1997–1998 . . . . . | 276 |
| Chapter Seven                                                                |     |
| FINAL OBSERVATIONS . . . . .                                                 | 279 |
| What Do the Case Studies Show? . . . . .                                     | 279 |
| Benefits of Using the Model . . . . .                                        | 281 |
| Cautionary Notes on Using the Model . . . . .                                | 284 |
| Additional Uses of the Model . . . . .                                       | 287 |
| Future Research and Further Development of the Model . . . . .               | 288 |
| Appendix: QUESTIONS AND GUIDELINES FORTHE ANALYST . . . . .              | 291 |
| About the Authors . . . . .                                                  | 329 |