

Contents

Prologue	1
PART I 'THE MAN, A CENTURY'	7
1 Sartre's Fame	9
Sartre and women: a love named Beaver	10
What is a fashion?	17
Sartre as a State	19
The anti-de Gaulle	22
For Sainte-Beuve	24
Against the rule of the lachrymose	31
On hatred	33
A young Sartre	38
2 Stendhal and Spinoza	42
The total intellectual	44
What is a philosophical novel?	47
The philosopher-artist	54
What is literature?	60
The Mallarmé-Debord axis	69
3 Taking Leave of Gide	74
The century of Gide	76
A Gidean Sartre	79
Dos Passos, Joyce, Céline	85
Literature is war	95

4	A 'German' Philosopher	102
	A philosophical monument: Bergsonism	102
	Bergson, Gide and company	107
	The nature of things	112
	Sartre and Heidegger	116
	A Nietzschean Sartre	127
5	Note on the Heidegger Question	134
	Exhibits	136
	An Against Sainte-Beuve for Heidegger?	141
	How is it possible to be at one and the same time the greatest philosopher of the twentieth century and a Nazi?	149
	PART II JUSTICE FOR JEAN-PAUL SARTRE	163
1	Existentialism is an Anti-humanism	165
	The nature of things	166
	Jean Cavaillès, Resistance fighter on logical grounds	170
	An Althusserian avant la lettre ?	177
	Attached note on the Althusser case	180
	What is a subject?	186
	Sartre and the moderns	190
	The Leibniz–Spinoza–Merleau–Deleuze line against the Descartes–Husserl–Levinas–Sartre axis	195
2	What is a Monster? (biographical fragments)	202
3	Anti-Fascist from Beginning to End	238
	The love of polemics	239
	There is no natural community	245
	The question of evil	252
	A short note on Sartre's ugliness	258
	Theologians, philosophers and despots	262
4	Note on the Vichy Question: Sartre in the Resistance	269
	His pre-war years	270
	A mysterious escape?	272
	The Bariona affair	272
	The Flies	277
	Two Rastignacs under the Occupation	280
	An unfair trial	284
	A question of principle	286
	Sartre in the Resistance	289

5 Sartre, Now	295
What is an anti-Pétainist?	295
Sartre versus Foucault	299
Sartre and the Jews: reflections on the Sartre question	301
Sartre, a dream . . .	306
The Camus affair	308
Why we are, all the same, right to be wrong with Sartre rather than right with Camus	313

PART III THE MADNESS OF THE AGE 321

1 Another Sartre (snapshots)	323
Self-hatred	324
On anti-Americanism	327
'The freedom to criticize is total in the USSR'	328
The last Stalinist in France?	330
After Budapest	331
When Sartre insulted Solzhenitsyn	334
The generous man	336
Imagination	338
His friend Castro	339
Violence, a new idea?	341
In praise of terrorism	342
Bleed the bosses like pigs!	344
Mingled waters	345
The temptation of the adventurer	348
The love of Italy	350
Write Flaubert and die?	352
2 On the Workings of Error in the Life of an Intellectual	355
On the notion of 'situation' in the history of ideas	355
On the status of the truth in the life of ideas	363
Note on the importance of grace in politics	375
3 The Confession	381
Sartre's 'great turning-point'	382
Becoming your own Autodidact	385
A reading of Bariona	389
Aragon, Drieu, Rolland and co.: return to the thirties	395
The abjuration	398
Humanist, thus Fascist?	404
Saved by literature	409

4	Sartre's Failure	412
	Hegel, Kojève and the century	413
	'Hegel's Jews': who were they?	417
	Philosophy, again, or how to escape from the magic circle of Hegelianism	424
	They do shoot philosophers, don't they?	430
	A Leftist Kojève	439
5	Requiem for Literature	445
	A false autobiography	446
	The real meaning of Words	449
	The farewell to literature: a French tradition	456
	Nizan, Breton, Politzer and various others	462
	Words : a Maoist book	468
	EPILOGUE	476
	The encounter with Benny Lévy	479
	Scandal among the Sartreans	483
	A Jewish Sartre?	486
	Jewish like Sartre	490
	Sartre with Levinas	494
	Our young man	498
	Notes	503