

Contents

Acknowledgements	xiii
Introduction	xv

I. Scientific and Cultural Prologue

CHAPTER ONE. Cosmic Process: Past and Future	3
Evolving Fruitfulness
Threat
Certain Catastrophes
Questions to Theology
CHAPTER TWO. Insights from Natural Science	14
Features of the Present Creation
Responses within Science
CHAPTER THREE. Human Intuition and Experience	28
Hope
Intuitions of Reality
Paranormal Experiences
CHAPTER FOUR. Cultural Context	37
The Legacy of the Past
Present Consequences
Cultural Memory
Limitations
Hope

CONTENTS

II. Biblical Resources

CHAPTER FIVE. Old Testament Insights	53
Life and Death
God in History
Apocalyptic
Further Eschatological Themes
CHAPTER SIX. The Resurrection of Jesus	66
The Riddle of Jesus
Appearances
The Empty Tomb
Pauline Reflection
Contemporary Consonance
CHAPTER SEVEN. Further New Testament Insights	80
The Kingdom of God
Life after Death
New Creation
Hope Revisited

III. Theological Approaches

CHAPTER EIGHT. The God of Hope	93
Theological Hope
Forgiveness and Joy
Realised Eschatology
The Sacramental Life
CHAPTER NINE. Personhood and the Soul	103
The Soul
Destiny beyond Death
CHAPTER TEN. The New Creation	113
Cosmic Hope
The World to Come
All Creation
CHAPTER ELEVEN. The Four Last Things	124
Death
Judgement
Heaven
Hell

CONTENTS

CHAPTER TWELVE. The Significance of the End	139
Comparisons
Eschatological Verification
Eschatological Criteria
Index	151

I am very grateful to the Center of Theological Inquiry, Princeton, and to its Director, Dr Wallace Alston, for generous hospitality both during deliberations of the C/I Eschatology Project (one of whose meetings was held in Heidelberg at the kind invitation of the Internationale Wissenschaftsforum) and also subsequently during a period of Membership of the Center that enabled me to complete the writing of this book. My intellectual debt to my colleagues on the Project will be obvious in the pages that follow. It is with sincere gratitude that I dedicate this book to these sources of stimulation and support.

I thank the staff of Yale University Press for their assistance in preparing the manuscript for press, and my wife, Ruth, for her help in correcting the proofs.