

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction	xi
I: The Premises of Modern Liberalism
1 Three Philosophical Claims	3
2 The Rational and Reasonable	27
3 The Moral System	43
II: The Liberal Idea of Tolerance
4 Regarding the Concept	53
5 On Relevant Convictions	61
6 About the Power and Competence to Tolerate	77
III: Tolerance in Modern Liberalism
7 Tolerance as Reasonableness: John Rawls's Conception	91
8 Tolerance and the Two Normative Systems: Ernesto Garzón Valdés's Conception	97
9 Tolerance as a Virtue of Justice: Rainer Forst's Conception	107
10 Tolerance and the Moral System	115
IV: The Moral Paradox of Tolerance
11 The Limits of Tolerance	121
12 Tolerance and the Conceptions of the Good	129
13 Tolerance as a Moral Dilemma	143
14 Tolerance in the Moral System	161
V: The Aretaic Turn
15 The Practical Impossibility of Tolerance	171
16 Tolerance as a Dispositional Property	193
17 The Contextual Response	205
Bibliography	219

Index	227
About the Author	231