

Contents

List of contributors	vii
Acknowledgements	x

Researching far-right movements. An introduction 1

EMANUELE TOSCANO

1 The specificities of researching evil 13

MICHEL WIEVIORKA

2 “Field observer: Simples.” Finding a place from which to do close-up research on the “far right” 23

HILARY PILKINGTON

3 Rapport, respect, and dissonance: Studying the white power movement in the United States 41

LISA K. WALDNER AND BETTY A. DOBRATZ

4 Rethinking the party, the state and the world: The case of Turkish right-wing nationalist youth in Gezi protests 59

DERYA GÖÇER AKDER AND KÜBRA OĞUZ

5 Reporting the “good deeds” of far-right activists 75

DANIEL BIZEUL

6 The dark side of the field. Doing research on CasaPound in Italy 90

EMANUELE TOSCANO AND DANIELE DI NUNZIO

7 Uncustomary sisterhood: Feminist research in Japanese conservative movements	107
AYAKA SUZUKI
8 Militant far-right royalist groups on Facebook in Thailand. Methodological and ethical challenges of Internet-based research	121
WOLFRAM SCHAFFAR AND NARUEMON THABCHUMPON
Conclusions. Doing research on far-right movements	140
EMANUELE TOSCANO
Index	146