

Contents

List of illustrations	x
Notes on contributors	xiii
Introduction	xvii
ANDREAS HOHLT, NICOLE C. KARAFYLLIS, ORTWIN RENN AND DOROTHEA TAUBE
PART I
STEM education between universalism and cultural relativism	1
1 Why ‘technology’ is not universal: philosophical remarks on the language and culture issue of STEM education	3
NICOLE C. KARAFYLLIS
2 Universals in STEM education	19
INTERVIEW WITH HEINZ DUDDECK (ENGINEER) AND RANDOLF MENZEL (BIOLOGIST)
PART II
STEM education worldwide: perspectives on situations in six countries	27
3 The shift in public perception of science and science education in post-war Japan	29
TAKUJI OKAMOTO
4 Gunpla robot toys and the popularization of robotics in Japan	46
COSIMA WAGNER

5	From national mission to what? Shifts in the implications of science and technology in South Korea	52
	JUNG-OK HA
6	Challenges for STEM education in India	69
	SUNDAR SARUKKAI
7	Corporate social responsibility programmes for STEM education: cases from the Indian technology cluster city of Hyderabad	85
	NAGALAKSHMI CHELLURI AND MOHAN V. AVVARI
8	Highlights of STEM education in Egypt	94
	GHADA K. GHOLAM AND NASSER MANSOUR
9	Tertiary education in the GCC countries (UAE, Qatar, Saudi Arabia): how economy, gender and culture affect the field of STEM	112
	NICOLE C. KARAFYLLIS
10	Science culture in Brazilian society	134
	SIMON SCHWARTZMAN
11	Policy controversies in science education in Brazil: a brief overview	154
	ELIZABETH BALBACHEVSKY AND EDILENE CRUZ
12	Closing the achievement gap and building the pipeline through STEM education: a US perspective	160
	YVONNE M. SPICER
13	The NRC Framework and the Next Generation Science Standards: an opportunity to improve science education in the USA	180
	ARTHUR EISENKRAFT
PART III
	STEM education from a comparative transnational perspective	189
14	STEM education from a comparative transnational perspective: results of a group Delphi process	191
	DOROTHEA TAUBE, ORTWIN RENN AND ANDREAS HOHLT

15 Lessons learned: towards unity in diversity	216
ANDREAS HOHLT, ORTWIN RENN, DOROTHEA TAUBE AND NICOLE C. KARAFYLLIS
16 Responding to challenges of rapid global change by strengthening local STEM education	230
ILAN CHABAY
Index	238