

CONTENTS

Preface. Dainis Īvāns	15
Introduction THE NON-VIOLENT WAY OF RESTORING BALTIC STATE INDEPENDENCE, AND ITS INTERNATIONAL POLITICAL SIGNIFICANCE. Tāļavs Jundzis	21
The concept of non-violent resistance and its application to asymmetric conflicts	21
A theoretical basis for investigating campaigns based on non-violent resistance	22
Armed struggle and non-violent resistance during the occupation of Latvia	26
Non-violent resistance in Latvia as a strategy to regain independence	27
The tactics of non-violent resistance	30
International relevance of the non-violent resistance movement in Latvia	33
Original research which is the basis for this book	35
 Part I. THE SIGNIFICANCE OF THE BALTIC STRUGGLES FOR INDEPENDENCE. Gene Sharp	37
Chapter I. Liberation by popular struggle	39
Another history	40
Misconceptions about nonviolent action	41
The nature of nonviolent action	41
The methods of nonviolent action	42
Repression and defiance	44
Chapter II. Nonviolent power against domination	46
Vulnerable sources of power	47
Chapter III. Results of practical wisdom	49
Success and failure	49
Advantages of nonviolent action	50
Widespread pragmatic practice	51
Chapter IV. In historical context	53
From improvisation to increased effectiveness	55
Research and policy studies	57
Decisions and implementation	58
Changing power relations	60

Part II.	NON-VIOLENT RESISTANCE IN LATVIA (1945–1985).
	Heinrihs Strods	61

Introduction 63

Chapter I. The origins of non-violent resistance and social background of persons involved in it 68

Armed resistance and non-violent resistance 68

The social origin of persons engaged in non-violent resistance 74

Chapter II. Passive non-violent resistance 82

Resistance expressed through cultural activities 82

Resistance by the Churches 94

Political non-co-operation 101

Chapter III. Active non-violent resistance 107

Uncooperative and defiant behaviour 107

Active opposition 115

Resistance by political prisoners 120

Emigration and flight abroad 124

Activities carried out abroad 135

Resistance groups 148

Conclusions 163

Part III. THE STRUGGLE BY LATVIAN NATIONAL COMMUNISTS AGAINST THE COLONISATION AND RUSSIFICATION OF LATVIA (1956–1972). Jānis Riekstiņš 167

Introduction 169

Chapter I. Opposing actions undertaken within state structures 172

Conditions under which National Communism came into being in Latvia 172

Resistance to the colonisation of Latvia 175

The fight for use of the Latvian language and for more Latvian leaders 180

Restrictions on the privileges of retired military personnel 186

On the training and deployment of national specialists 187

Preservation and access to the Latvian literary and cultural heritage 188

Repression of the national communist opposition 193

Chapter II. The protest letter by 17 Latvian communists to foreign communist parties	198
Suppression by Soviet officials of nationalist tendencies and limitation of republican autonomy	198
Imposition of the paradigm of a "Soviet people" on the nations of the Soviet Empire	199
The situation in Latvia after repression of the national communists	201
Drafting the letter	203
Response to the letter in the West	207
Echoes of the letter in Latvia	210
Conclusions	213
Appendix	216
The 17 Latvian Communist Protest Letter	217
 Part IV. THE PERIOD OF THE AWAKENING AND NON-VIOLENT RESISTANCE (1986 – 4 MAY 1990). Valdis Blūzma	229
 Chapter I. The political and social conditions in Latvia and in the Soviet Union in the second half of the 1980s	231
The concept of the Awakening in Latvian history	231
The nature of the Third Awakening	236
Political, national and social problems of the 1980s in Latvia as a catalyst for the Third Awakening	240
The origins, goals and achievements of the Gorbachev reforms	250
Economic problems of the USSR and attempted resolution in the late 1980s	250
Ideological motivation for the policy of reform	257
Attempted reform of the USSR political system	262
 Chapter II. Informal organisations as the initiators of open non-violent resistance during the first phase of the Third Awakening (1986–1990)	270
Legal basis for informal organisations in the Soviet Union and in Latvia	270
The structure of informal organisations in Latvia	278
The non-violent resistance principles adopted by Latvian informal organisations	283

The goals and non-violent protest activities of informal organisations	286
Publications (samizdat) not approved by the State Censor	292
Dissemination by informal organisations of information through publications not controlled by the State Censor, or with the help of Western radio stations	296
Public dissemination of political and legal demands made to official institutions which constrained Communist Party and Soviet state officials to reply	297
Gathering signatures in support of political demands made by informal organisations	298
Public commemoration of historically significant dates proscribed by the Soviet regime	299
Public display of national symbols	300
Demonstrations in support of on-going political processes	302
Demonstrations about acute socio-economic issues	302
Political demonstrations at funerals	303
Public discussion of crucial passages of 20 th century Latvian history	304
Hunger strikes by prisoners protesting their illegal arrest	305
Public solidarity demanding freeing arrested opposition group members	305
Emergence of structured co-operation between informal organisations	305
Acts of solidarity with opposition movements elsewhere in the USSR	308
Joint activities with informal organisations elsewhere in the USSR	310
Establishing links with Latvian organisations in the West and with foreign representatives to inform and seek support from the international community	310
The principal achievements of the informal resistance groups	312

Chapter III. Engagement of society in acts of non-violent resistance: resistance to the Soviet regime during the period of the Third Awakening	314
The different phases of the Latvian resistance movement	314
Phase 1. Initial attempts at organised public resistance (July 1986 to May 1988)	314
Phase 2. The formation of the mass resistance movement (June 1988 to May 1989)	315
Phase 3. United struggle by national democratic forces to restore the independence of Latvia (June 1989 to May 1990)	315
Political activities of the Latvian intelligentsia ahead of creation of the Latvian Popular Front	316
Formation of the Latvian Popular Front	329
The LPF and restoration of Latvian independence by parliamentary means	344
The Declaration on Independence of 4 May 1990	349
Chapter IV. The influence of the Latvian national democratic movement on the power structures of the communist regime in Latvia (1986–1990)	357
Political repression of informal organisations by the totalitarian regime in Latvia, 1987–1990	358
The position of the Latvian CP leadership on creating in 1988 a legal opposition in Latvia	377
The position of the Communist Party on restoration of Latvian independence	386
Relations between the Supreme Soviet of the Latvian SSR and the national democratic movement	389
Split in the Communist Party of Latvia induced by activities of the national democratic movement	392
Conclusions	397
Part V. THE ROLE OF NON-VIOLENT RESISTANCE IN THE STRUGGLE TO ACHIEVE FULL INDEPENDENCE (4 MAY 1990 – 21 AUGUST 1991). Tāļavs Jundzis	401
Chapter I. The strategy and tactics of non-violent resistance during the period of dual administration	403
The struggle for supremacy by opposing political forces post adoption of the Declaration on Restoration of Independence	403

Leading the campaign of non-violent resistance and the different options which were contemplated	415
The Supreme Council of the Republic of Latvia and the Council of Ministers	416
The Popular Front of Latvia	425
Several proposals for the campaign to regain full independence	433
Action by supporters of independence to take power peacefully	443
Public administration	444
Military issues	456
Issues related to maintaining social order and ensuring public security	463
The economy	470
Legislative activities and respect for the rights of citizens	478
Local authorities	487
The tactics of non-violent resistance pursued in relations with the USSR	491
The campaign to gain international recognition	501
Co-operation between the Baltic States during restoration of full independence	512
The role of émigrés in strengthening the independence of Latvia	520
Increased professionalism in applying the techniques of non-violent resistance	523
Chapter II. Non-violent resistance during the severe political crises of January and August 1991	532
Salient features of the political crisis of January 1991	532
The role of the Supreme Council in overcoming the political crisis	543
Preparations made by the Latvian Popular Front in anticipation of X-hour	549
The January Barricades — the supreme act of non-violent resistance	558
Construction of the barricades	558
Leadership of the defenders on the barricades	565

The defenders of the barricades	570
Organising non-violent defence of the barricades	576
The role of radio, television and the press during the time of the barricades	582
The role of the international community in peaceful resolution of the January crisis	586
The impact and relevance of the barricades	593
The August putsch in Latvia	598
Acts of non-violent resistance during the August putsch	602
Conclusions	612
Chronology	615
Glossary of terms	638
Index of persons	653
List of literature	666
About the authors	670