

CONTENTS

THE PECULIARITY OF THE CROATIAN RECEPTION OF DRAMATIC MUSIC IN THE 17TH AND 18TH CENTURY

1. The Croatian Contribution to the Late Renaissance Theory of Dramatic Music from Franjo Petrić (Francesco Patrizi) to Pasko Primović and Ivan Gundulić	7
2. Croatian Baroque Libretto-Based Drama: the Junije Palmotić Era	24
3. The dramatists Vice Pucić, Šiško Gundulić, Ivan Gučetić Jr., Jaketa Palmotić and the historian of the Venetian libretto Kristoforo Ivanović	37
4. Vučistrah by Petar Kanavelić, the central libretto-inspired drama of the second half of the 17 th century	48
5. Antun Gleđević and Ivan Šiško Gundulić, followers of reform in the libretto from the time of Apostolo Zeno	54
6. Pietro Metastasio and the last phase of libretto-inspired drama in Dubrovnik	62

Ennio Stipčević

OPERA LIBRETTO WITHOUT MUSIC

1. The Renaissance heritage in Baroque theatre and music	67
2. The earliest Mantuan and Florentine libretti in Croatian translations	82
3. Venetian libretto writing and stage illusionism	90
4. Operatic reform in Croatian tragicomedy and music	100
5. Libretti without music	104
6. Epilogue	108
Bibliography	117
Index	131

Notes: Split Književni arhiv, 1989, Franjo Špoler: "Tragikomedija i komična drama u Dubrovniku XVII. stoljeća" [Tragedy and Comedy in Dubrovnik in the Seventeenth Century], in: Zadarske crteže 38/1-6 (1989), pp. 387-411; Nikola Bašić: "Elementi scenike fantastike u dubrovačkim dramskim djelima" [Elements of Scene Fantasy in Dubrovnik Drama of Seventeenth Century], in: Dubrovčki književni simpozij: ratna književnost, ed. Duško Pešićević, Zagreb: Zavod za znanost o jugoslaviji, 1991, pp. 249-266.