CONTENT

	2. Reproduction of rhythmical concerns offer RAL or
	Introduction	11
I.	Practical importance of psychological autoregulation	14
II.	Methodology of the problem	20
III.	Mental relations and emotions	22
IV.	Psychophysiological states	26
V.	Concept and aims of psychological autoregulation	28
VI.	General characteristics of the relaxation-activation auto-
	regulative procedure	36
VII.	Brief review of autoregulative methods	39
VIII.	Instructions for the training of the relaxation activation
	method (RAM)	54
	1. Introductory remarks to the training of RAM	54
	2. Written summary of RAM training instruction	57
IX.	Objektive indicators of the relaxation — activation auto-
	regulative intervention (RAI)	75
	1. Changes in electric skin resistance	75
	1.1. Method and results of control of RAI	76
	1.2. The effect of breathing on changes in electric skin resistance	79
	1.3. Evaluation of changes in electric skin resistance in activation phases and the law of initial value	85
	1.4. Changes in electric skin resistance at RAI as an objective indicator of the so-called activation level	96
	1.5. The subjective rating of RAI and some parameters of GSR curve	100
	2. Changes in arterial blood pressure	105
	3. Changes in heart rate	118
	4. Vasomotor changes	129
	5. Frequency changes in brain potentials	134
	6. Evoked EEG responses to light stimuli	141
	7 Changes in skin notentials	144

8. Pupillary changes	150
9. Changes in critical flicker fusion frequency	162
Influence of relaxation-activation intervention on the subsequent psychophysiological state of trained subject	167
1. Changes of mental state 2 and 24 hours after RAI	167
2. Changes in the level of catecholamines in urine	190
Influence of relaxation - activation intervention on efficiency	201
1. Changes in efficiency after RAI and Dexfenmetrazin in a cancellation test	201
2. Reproduction of rhythmical movements after RAI	208
3. The influence of RAI on the simultaneous performance of mental and motor activity	210
4. The influence of RAI on the sensomotor performance
during shock expectancy and in temporal stress	226
Summary	237
Summary in Russian	241
	245
	250
effect of RAI	254
References	264
Author index	280
Subject index	284
	ZI.
vation method
	Influence of relaxation-activation intervention on the subsequent psychophysiological state of trained subject 1. Changes of mental state 2 and 24 hours after RAI 2. Changes in the level of catecholamines in urine Influence of relaxation — activation intervention on efficiency 1. Changes in efficiency after RAI and Dexfenmetrazin in a cancellation test 2. Reproduction of rhythmical movements after RAI 3. The influence of RAI on the simultaneous performance of mental and motor activity 4. The influence of RAI on the sensomotor performance during shock expectancy and in temporal stress Summary Summary in Russian Summary in German Summary in German Summary in Czech Supplement: Case characterizations of the course and effect of RAI References Author index Subject index Czech version of training instruction of the relaxation-acti-