

CONTENTS

Foreword by Mr. Suresh K. Goel, Director General, ICCR, New Delhi	7
0. Introduction	9
Section 1	15
1. Chettiarthodi Rajendran: Towards a more inclusive Indology: Problems and Prospects	17
2. Aloka Parasher-Sen: The 'Fragment' and the 'Whole' – bridging 'Indological Studies' and identities in contemporary India	25
3. Harbans Mukhia: Filling-in some voids	37
4. Martin Hříbek: Czech Indology and the concept of Orientalism	45
5. Kunchapudi Srinivas: The method of investigation in Indian tradition	57
6. Zdeněk Štípl: The significance of teaching modern Indian history in Indology	69
7. Siniruddha Dash: The grammatical traditions and linguistic analysis in ancient India (with special reference to Pāṇini and Tolkāppiyam)	75
8. Surinder Singh: Locating Islam in the historical experience of South Asia: Reflections on politics, society and culture	99
9. Jaroslav Strnad: Interpretations of Kabīr: linguistic, literary and historical issues	111
10. Petr Duda: Indology in e-space	117
Section 2	123
11. Danuta Stasik: Regional co-operation in Central and Eastern Europe: Overview and appraisal	125
12. Marzenna Czerniak-Drożdżowicz: Indology in Cracow – facing new challenges, viewing new perspectives	131
13. Klara Gönc Močanin: The state and status of Indology in Croatia today	137
14. Svetislav Kostić: Teaching Hindi in the Czech Republic. A historic overview and Czech contribution to the understanding of Hindi	145
15. Dagmar Marková: Some questions concerning teaching, research and translating modern Hindi literature in the Czech Republic	155
16. Anna Trynkowska: Indian Studies at the University of Warsaw: The creation and implementation of the first cycle and second cycle study programmes (2006 – June 2010)	161
17. Jaroslav Vacek: Indology – a complex branch of knowledge	171
18. List of contributors	177
19. Indexes	179