

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements	4
Introduction	5
Chapter 1: Relevant Varieties of English	13
1.1 The Status of English at Present	13
1.1.1 English as a Lingua Franca	16
1.1.2 The Situation in Central Europe	19
1.1.3 World Englishes	21
1.1.4 Standard Language	23
1.1.5 English in Czech Science and Technology	27
Chapter 2: Written Language as Discourse	32
2.1 Communicative Intentions in a Written Text	38
2.2 Discourse and Discourse Community	42
Chapter 3: Characteristics of English for Electrical Engineering	47
3.1 Discourse Analysis	48
3.2 Stylistic Features of English for Electrical Engineering	51
3.2.1 Genres	52
3.2.2 Popular Scientific Style vs. the Style of Science and Technology	54
3.2.3 Stylistic Strategies	65
3.2.3.1 Lexical cohesion	65
3.2.3.2 Deixis	87
3.2.3.3 Hedging	88
3.2.3.4 Signposting	91
3.3 Pragmatics : Pragmatics	92
3.3.1 Coherence	94
3.3.2 Mental Schemata of Knowledge – Pragmatic Meaning	102
3.3.3 Terminology	107
3.3.4 Manifestation of the Co-operative Principle in Technical Texts	109
3.3.5 Manifestation of the Politeness Principle in EEE	116
3.4 Functions of Professional Scientific Discourse	119

3.4.1 Speech Acts : Literacy Events	121
Explication	124
Exemplification	135
Evaluation.....	137
Argumentation	139
Defining	142
Concluding	145
3.5 Approaches to Recipients and Social Stance of Text
Producers	149
Impersonality.....	151
Personality.....	151
Subjectivity	155
Objectivity.....	158
Uncertainty.....	161
Formality	165
Chapter 4: Sociolinguistic Features.....	167
4.1 Power through Language.....	170
Chapter 5: Conclusions: Parameters of English for Electrical
Engineering	177
Pragmatic Aspects	179
Psycholinguistic Features.....	181
Sociolinguistic Features	183
Glossary of Terms.....	186
References	190
Corpus of Excerpted Books and Journals.....	197