

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Introduction: From Analogue to Digital Legal Scholarship
The Editors	xiii

Frameworks

1: Distant Reading the Law
Michael A. Livermore and Daniel N. Rockmore	3
2: Big Data, Machine Learning, and the Credibility Revolution in Empirical Legal Studies
Ryan Copus, Ryan Hübert, and Hannah Laqueur	21
3: Text as Observational Data
Marion Dumas and Jens Frankenreiter	59
4: Prediction Before Inference
Allen Riddell	73

Investigation

5: Style and Substance on the US Supreme Court
Keith Carlson, Daniel N. Rockmore, Allen Riddell, Jon Ashley, and Michael A. Livermore	83
6: Predicting Legislative Floor Action
Vlad Eidelman, Anastassia Kornilova, and Daniel Argyle	117
7: Writing Style and Legal Traditions
Jens Frankenreiter	153
8: A Computational Analysis of California Parole Suitability Hearings
Hannah Laqueur and Anna Venancio	193
9: Analyzing Public Comments
Vlad Eidelman, Brian Grom, and Michael A. Livermore	233

Exploration

- 10: Using Text Analytics to Predict Litigation Outcomes
Charlotte S. Alexander, Khalifeh al Jadda, Mohammad Javad Feizollahi, and Anne M. Tucker 275
- 11: Case Vectors: Spatial Representations of the Law Using Document Embeddings
Elliott Ash and Daniel L. Chen 313
- 12: Reference Networks and Civil Codes
Adam B. Badawi and Giuseppe Dari-Mattiacci 339
- 13: Attorney Voice and the US Supreme Court
Daniel L. Chen, Yosh Halberstam, Manoj Kumar, and Alan C. L. Yu 367
- 14: Detecting Ideology in Judicial Language
Marion Dumas 383
- 15: Opinion Clarity in State and Federal Trial Courts
Adam Feldman 407

Conjecture

- 16: Machine Learning and the Rule of Law
Daniel L. Chen 433
- 17: The Law Search Turing Test
Michael A. Livermore and Daniel N. Rockmore 443

Reference

- Bibliography 455