

Contents

Series Editor's Introduction ix

Acknowledgments xiii

Introduction: Network Neutrality, Media Reform, and Neoliberalism 1

Network Neutrality's Common Narrative 12

Ghosts of Former Debates and Conspicuous Absences 21

Digital Capitalism Settling In 25

Approach 29

Chapter Breakdown 45

1 Knowledge and the Neoliberal Thought Collective: Viewing Network Neutrality through the Appropriate Lens 51

Conduit and Content: Liberalization and a Long-Contested Realm 52

The Quandary of Network Neutrality 56

Rethinking Regulatory Process 65

Discourse and Views "from Below" 70

Reconsidering How We Tell the Story of Network Neutrality 77

Knowledge, and Its Material Buttress 83

The Uses of Economic Theory 96

Tim Wu's Contribution, Revisited 100

2 Open Access: Nascent Moves to Counter Cable Giant Power in the Late 1990s 105

From Dial-Up to the Possibility of Cable Broadband 108

The FCC Explores Its Options 113

Portland, Oregon: The "Mouse That Roared" 121

Finding a Space between Capitals: Constructing a Conceptual Frame 133

The Wildfire Spreads 147

3	Knowing the Net, 1: At a Relative Apex	151
	Consumer Advocates on the Move	153
	Expanding Their Purview	162
	AT&T Sets Its Sights on MediaOne	166
	The FCC Attempts to Thwart Local Efforts and Consumer Arguments	174
	Advocates at an Apex	181
4	Knowing the Net, 2: The FCC Decides in Cable's Favor	183
	From Vague Directive to the Core	188
	AOL Buys a Wire of Its Own	195
	Advocate Frustration at the FCC	201
	Wearing Down, Ramping Up	208
	Localities Lose the Issue	210
	A Double-Edged Sword: The Ninth Circuit Decides	213
	AOL Time Warner as Ambiguous Consolation Prize	219
	The Powell FCC Takes Over	227
	Conclusion	231
5	Erasures and Emergences: Net Neutrality's Ambivalent Emergence	237
	Media Reform and Broadband Politics	238
	Setting the Tone: Developing on the "One Monopoly Profit" Principle	242
	Wu Sketches Out Net Neutrality	246
	The Trap, Tripped	251
	Brandeisian Populism and Economic Efficiency	255
	Two Sides, One Coin	265
	Conclusion	269
6	Advocates, Regulators, and the Ersatz: Defeat Snatched from the Jaws of Victory	273
	Institution Building and Expansion	277
	Meeting the Ersatz	284
	Shifting Terrain	294
	Wrenching Defeat from the Jaws of Victory	304
	The Perils of Access	313
	Conclusion	317

7 The Shifting Political Economics of Net Neutrality: A Continuum, Not a Break 321

- The Engines of Production Rev Again 323
- Shifting Dynamics of Resistance 330
- Activism Led, Capital Followed: The Cultural Labor of Network Neutrality 338
- Continuity across Seeming Transformations 347
- Conclusion 349

8 Knowledge, Access, and the Currents Flowing Beneath 353

- The Issue of Universal Service 355
- Newly Emergent Value Subjects: An Industry View 359
- Shifts in the Political Economy of Access 364
- Considering Platforms 372
- Emergent Trends 387
- The Dimensions Missed on All Sides 392
- Conclusion 401

9 Net Neutrality as Wrecking Ball 405

- A Suggestion, and a Warning, Is Offered 407
- Dismantling the Administrative State 411
- Harkening Back to the Future 417
- Epistemic Battles, Redux 419
- Activism in a Void 428
- The Order 435
- Hypercharged Neoliberalism 440

Conclusion 445

- Interregnum 445
- Ambivalence in Teleology 447
- Neoliberal Sincerity 451
- Rational Responses as Traps 453
- Three Questions 460

Notes 463

References 471

Index 519